WLB Refers To Hold-Line Directive as Unworkable

Power Gone

The full War Labor Board conferred for several hours yesterday with Economic Stabilization Director James F. Byrnes at the White House and protested that it regarded the "hold the line" executive order as unworkable.

The four labor members of the 12-man tripartite board were reported to have done most of the talking, advising Byrnes that they saw "no use" for them to remain on the board if its present policies remain unchanged. The labor members charged that recent changes in policy had destroyed the "judicial" character of the board, leaving it only a relatively routine administrative job which could be performed just as effectively by "a mathematician and a bunch of clerks."

Would Wreck Board

Officials agreed that labor departure from the WLB would wreck it, since enforcement of the Nation-wide "no strike" agreement has been accomplished with the aid of labor members who have frequently "cracked down" on subordinate labor officials leading "wildcat strikes."

Byrnes made no commitments and gave no indication that substantial modifications may be expected, it was said. The conferences between Byrnes and the board are to be resumed today with a committee of public members.

Other members of the board were also said to have informed Byrnes that they did not think the board could continue to function effectively under the order which allows the board to increase wages only in line with the "Little Steel" formula or to correct substandard living conditions. Prior to April 8, when the "hold the line" order was issued, WLB had authority to grant increases to correct inequi-

Colonel Found Shot to Death In Hotel Room

A U. S. Army officer, believed by police to be Lieut. Col. K. L. Ogle, was found shot to death in a room in the Washington Hotel last night.

Police said a .45 caliber revolver was found beside him. Members of the homicide squad and the coroner were investigating early today.

War Department records show that a Lieut. Col. Kenneth L. Ogle was assigned to a unit at Ford Ord, Calif., last November.

2 Warplanes Eager for Battle Will Be Dedicated Sunday

(Pictures of the Planes, Other Warplane News, Page 8.)

Washington's thousands of Federal employes, District of Columbia citizens, soldiers, sailors and marines, on duty and on leave, will mass Sunday at 3 p. m. in the Nation's greatest warplane dedication—the christening of the two "Government Girls."

Officially the Federal Government, the Army and the Navy will be represented and take a leading part in the exercises which will result in the speeding of the formidable pair of warplanes—an Army Mustang and a Navy Corsair—on their way to strike at the heart of hate, darkness and despair.

The ceremony, at which Lieut. Gen. H. H. Arnold of the Army Air Forces and Rear Adm. Ralph E. Davison, U. S. N. will accept the respective fighting craft, is to be held on the Ellipse, south of the White House.

Bands—one from the Army and one from the Navy—will sound off promptly at 2 p.m. The ceremony will begin promptly at 3 o'clock and end at 4:10 p.m.

Donald S. Dawson, chairman of the Council of Personnel Administration special committee and youthful director of personnel for the RFC, is master of ceremonies.

The warplanes will be christened by Irene Leftcheck (Army) and Edith Disney (Navy), both chosen a week ago by 80 guards of honor, all active in the campaign which was the result of a letter some weeks ago from Miss Agnes Richardy to Columnist Jerry Kluttz of the Washington Post.

Guards of honor and guests of honor will be seated near the speakers' platform, which is to be flanked by two warplanes.

Newsreel representatives, photographers, newspaper and magazine representatives will be present. The program and spectacular exercises, which bring to an end the campaign which grew almost of its own volition into perhaps the most impressive of its kind the country has ever known, is planned for speedy acceleration, Chairman Dawson said yesterday. The program will be broadcast.

"It is not that we are anxious about anything, except to send these two top-notch weapons under way as quickly as possible," Dawson explained.

Among the guests of honor will be representatives and heads of various Government agencies in Washington. Out-of-the-city officials, too, will attend.

From Cleveland, Ohio, where a naval bureau is located, wi'l come petite Cornelia Quil, an honor guard of Chinese descent, and from Philadelphia Miss Marguerite

Farley Once Backed Him, Monroe Says

But Democratic Chieftain Can't Remember Incident

By Edward Ryan
Post Staff Writer

John P. Monroe, recuperating from his bout with the House Military Committee, said yesterday he would stay on at the mansion at 2101 R Street Northwest, because "there isn't anything more they can do to me except sandbag me."

Military Affairs Chairman May (Democrat) of Kentucky said that it might be a week before his group took up the question of whether to cite Monroe for contempt for refusing to tell what new "high New Deal officials" warned him he was to be "smeared."

While the committee turned to other affairs, Monroe went back to his R Street residence-office, but not into retirement. He was kept busy during the day discussing reports that he had once worked for the RFC making loans, that he had been indorsed by former Postmaster General James A. Farley for a job in the Maritime Commission, and that he was threatened with loss of his Boston mansion for back taxes.

He denied any past connection with the RFC as an employe making loans, agreed that Farley had indorsed him for a job.

Treasury Starts New Battle On Ruml Plan

Bigger Abatements Asked for Persons In Lower Brackets

By Jack Bell
Associated Press Staff Writer

Opening a new fight against the Ruml plan, the Treasury argued yesterday that middle and lower income-tax payers will have to shoulder most of any new war taxes and hence are entitled to a proportionately larger abatement of 1942 taxes than persons of large income.

Randolph Paul, Treasury general counsel, advanced this contention as the Senate Finance Committee began hearings on pay-as-you-go tax legislation, with a majority reported to be leaning toward the Ruml-Carlson plan abating 1942 levies for all taxpayers except those with "windfall" incomes. This measure lost by only 4 votes in the House, where the Treasury had opposed it strenuously.

It would be most unfair, Paul asserted, to give what he termed inequitable abatements to taxpayers in the higher brackets if an addition 16 billion dollars in taxes is to be imposed, as President Roosevelt has suggested.

"Grossly Inequitable"

By and large, he said, any increases "will fall proportionately most heavily on the lower and middle incomes, since it is not feasible to raise the rate on higher incomes proportionately."

"It would be grossly inequitable to forgive taxes on income groups on whom future tax increase cannot be imposed and then to impose heavy tax increases on other income groups," he declared.

Paul left no doubt that the Treasury still wants the pay-as-you-go measure which was reported by the House Ways and Means Committee, but dumped overboard by the House. This would tax 1942 income at the lower 1941 levies.

The Treasury's second choice,

Mail Zone System Expected To Speed D. C. Delivery

Washington will have 20 delivery zone areas, Vincent C. Burke, Washington's postmaster, announced yesterday, following Postmaster General Frank C. Walker's order to set up a system of delivery zone numbers for mail in the Nation's 178 largest cities.

Patterned after systems now in effect in London and Toronto, although considerably simpler than the London zoning, the plan is expected to speed up delivery of mail.

Under the new system, new clerks, many of them women, which the city postoffice is now hiring by the hundreds to take the place of old timers going into the Army, may speed letters on their way by simply looking at the area number put on the letter as part of the address.

For example, Richard Roe, living in Washington zone 18, should be addressed thus: Richard Roe, 2819 Twenty-Sixth Street Northeast, Washington 18, D. C. John Doe, the sender, should be equally as explicit in recording his return address: After —— days return to John Doe, 3612 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest, Washington 16, D. C. The same procedure should, of course, be followed in posting letters to other cities in which the system exists.

Postmaster Burke urges all Washingtonians to notify those with whom they correspond of their delivery zone numbers. Notices containing the zone numbers will be placed in all mail boxes in the local delivery area. When the new system goes into effect, failure to include a delivery zone number as part of the address may be expected to considerably delay mail reaching its destination.

In Washington, the new system will apply to the entire local delivery area, which includes all of Bethesda, Chevy Chase and Takoma Park, Md., and sections of Anacostia and Benning, Md.

G.O.P. Denies Postwar Test In Trade Act

Minority Report Sees No Link To International Amity After War

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Three-year extension of the Reciprocal Trade Act yesterday was based squarely on the issue of world postwar economic cooperation in a 55-page Ways and Means Committee report recommending continuance of the law without change.

The majority report, clashing on almost every point with the Republican minority views, warned that "any untested changes now (in the reciprocal trade law) will result in the creation of doubts in the minds of our Allies and friends, doubts which, however unfounded, we cannot afford."

Two Days of Debate

The committee's solid Republican minority immediately filed a conflicting report denying extension of the act is a test of American postwar foreign policy and that other nations will construe it as such. The Republican report termed such arguments by Secretary of State Hull "not only unfortunate but imprudent and presumptuous."

The two committee statements touched off a historic congressional debate, formally opening Monday in the House. Even as they were filed, Ways and Means Committee Chairman Robert L. Doughton asked and obtained rules committee right of way for the trade agreements bill, under an open rule permitting two days of debate.

Representative Albert Gore, from Secretary Hull's old Fourth Tennessee District, did not wait for the start of debate. In a speech to the House, Gore called unrestricted extension of the act an elementary choice between economic cooperation between nations and "extreme economic isolationism."

"Surely, this is a field in which partisanship can be laid aside," Gore told the House. "I plead with you not to jeopardize our international understandings at this crucial moment, not to destroy world confidence, an important ally in the nobility of our intentions after victory, not to drive even our Allies into reconstruction of the age-old European abomination, balance of power."

House Republicans, who voted almost solidly against extension of the trade act in 1940, were expected to concentrate not on defeat of the bill but on adoption of a half dozen amendments capped by a provision for congressional veto of any trade agreement. To date, no party stand has been

Soviets Repel Five Attacks, Smash Ahead

Now Only 5 Miles From Novorossisk; Red Fleet Guards Against Evacuation

By the Associated Press

London (Friday), May 7.—Russian troops smashed five Axis counterattacks on the approaches to Novorossisk in the Caucasus Thursday and captured a number of important heights in the violent struggle to throw the Germans into the sea, Moscow announced early today.

Often fighting hand-to-hand, the Red Army forces killed 1500 more Germans, said the midnight communique, recorded by the Soviet Monitor. Thus in two days the Russians have reported the killing of nearly 9000 Germans who had clung to the narrow foothold.

Late reports said the Russians were only 5 miles from Novorossisk, and Soviet ships stood out to sea to smash any attempted Axis evacuation by boat.

5 Axis Attacks Fail

The five Axis counterattacks, each one more violent tha the preceding one, were launched in an effort to retake Neberdjayevskaya, 9 miles northeast of Novorossisk, the communique said.

In the Kuban River valley above Neberdjayevskaya, the communique said the important heights were taken in that area. The Russians thus were seeking to isolate the German garrison based at Novorossisk by cutting off any escape routes to the Taman peninsula opposite the Crimea.

The Russians already have cut the major roads linking the Novorossisk garrison with German forces fighting on the western end of the Taman Peninsula, but the Germans still hold a coastal road leading from Novorossisk to Anapa, 25 miles above the big port.

Reds Use Barges

A Berlin broadcast said the Russians also were using landing barges for commando raids along the coast at Novorossisk.

Another German broadcast recorded by the Associated Press suggested that the Russians were sending troops by ship from Rostov across the Sea of Azov to the Taman Peninsula above Novorossisk. The Transocean agency claimed that 11 Soviet "ferryboats" were destroyed by German bombers in the Sea of Azov.

Big Russian bombers also were continuing their offensive at German rear line bases elsewhere on the front, the Moscow radio announcing raids on Dnieperopetrovsk and Kremenchug in the Ukraine, and on Bryansk farther north.

'Of White House Origin'

Feuds Within Administration Laid to Current Czar System

By Robert De Vore
Post Staff Writer

The Senate War Investigating Committee yesterday traced to President Roosevelt administrative actions which it found basically to underlie the now dormant feud of Undersecretary of War Robert P. Patterson and Rubber Director William M. Jeffers.

In a report on its investigation of the historic scrap between the two officials, the committee, half concealing its charge in cautious, diplomatic language, identified as the basic fault the President's resort to appointment of Government "czars" to meet crises in production of such vital war materials as rubber and petroleum.

"Destructive, wasteful feuding must be suppressed," declared the committee headed by Senator Truman (Democrat) of Missouri. Controversy of the character of the Patterson-Jeffers battle over priorities for facilities needed both for the manufacture of synthetic rubber and refinement of aviation gasoline, "might seriously impair the effectiveness of able leaders," it warned. If necessary to preserve official unity, it declared, official "heads must be knocked together."

The report reached the Senate as that body began debate on legislation which would create yet another administrative "czar"—the Maloney-Taft-Scrugham bill for establishment of a civilian supply administrator with independent powers over those of War Production Chief Donald M. Nelson.

Reliable observers of Senate sentiment forecast that the measure would be passed, although the 10-man Truman Committee was reported to be unanimous in its opposition to it.

Senator Truman declared the bill would add "just another complication" to a war administration already muddled by a galaxy of "strong men" advocates of major phases of the war-production program.

While implying that WPB Chairman Nelson failed to exercise with all vigor possible the "sweeping powers" given him by the Persident in January, 1942, the committee declared "at least a partial answer" to be found in the creation of rubber and oil "czars" who were made responsible to Nelson, yet who were accorded authority equal to his in certain instances.

As a practical matter, the committee declared, Nelson's authority over Jeffers is "only tenuous," although "technically" the WPB chief "is the boss."

In the case of Petroleum Administrator Harold L. Ickes, whom the President put in charge of the 100-octane gasoline program, the executive order creating Ickes' office made him responsible directly to the President, although "subject to the direction" of Nelson, the committee observed.

Lines of authority between Nelson and Ickes, "confusing even on paper," the committee declared to "breed disputes such as" the Jeffers-Patterson row.

The committee also pointed an accusing finger at the notorious failure of top war administration officials to iron out their disputes in conferences in which all participate.

"Without dilution of the power of the chairman, the War Production Board should function as a board," the report stated. "The persons in charge of each major

Devers Named To Andrews' Command

Expert in Artillery Armored Force to Lead Invasion Army

By John G. Norris

America gave Germany strong indication yesterday that the hour of invasion was near when Lieut. Gen. Jacob L. Devers, commander of United States armored forces, was named to succeed Lieut. Gen. Frank M. Andrews, noted airman, as commander in chief of American Army forces in the European theater.

General Andrews was killed on Monday in a plane crash in Iceland.

The appointment hinted that the period of air assault alone on the continent was ended and that soon the Axis forces there might be fighting tanks, infantry and artillery.

Secretary of War Stimson left interpretation of the appointment to be drawn by others, but the significance was clear.

General Andrews, the Secretary noted, "was particularly well-qualified for the command of the European theater at this time when the principal operations were in the air." In his comment on Devers' appointment, he declared that the armored force chief was "especially fitted for the job."

Stimson added that General De-

Allied Planes In Record African Raids

Hammer Home Heaviest Blows on Shipping and Airfields

By Clinton Green
International News Service Staff Writer

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, May 6.—Allied air forces in the last 36 hours have hammered home the heaviest blows of the war on Axis shipping, airfields, transport, supply bases and other objectives.

A special communique issued at Allied headquarters tonight said:

"Taking advantage of complete air domination and making the most concentrated air attack of the war, the Northwest African Air Forces blasted a path in advance of our ground units. More than 2000 sorties were flown by the tactical air force . . . and 17 enemy aircraft were destroyed over their own landing grounds.

(Airmen use the word sortie to mean a single attack by a single plane.)

"Our land operations were carried out without any hindrance from hostile aircraft."

Destruction of the 17 enemy planes, added to 11 shot down yesterday when Allied air forces flew 1200 sorties, raised to 28 the total shot down in the last 36 hours. In addition, 25 enemy planes were destroyed or damaged on the ground yesterday. Only 4 Allied planes failed to return.

During the same period, at least 18 Axis ships of various sizes and

Troops Still Inspired in Battle By Daddy Rabbit Todd's Ideals

By Harold V. Boyle
Associated Press Staff Writer

With the American Army in Tunisia, April 21—(Delayed)—Lieut. Col. John H. Todd, jr., the "Daddy Rabbit" of the American armored forces, is both a hero and a legend.

I never saw him. I never shall. A German shell splinter killed him as he knelt on the ridge near Pont Du Fahs while directing a tank attack.

The picture of a rabbit and underneath it the words "The Daddy Rabbit" were painted on his own half track and his tank. When he led his men into action he'd say, "Follow the Daddy Rabbit." That's how he got his name.

This man who liked to call himself "just a poor country boy from Georgia trying to get along" has risen above death. Four months after he was buried in the little Beja Military Cemetery, his spirit flames as widely as ever among the tank men who followed him with a veneration akin to worship.

"He had more common sense in his little finger than most people have in their whole bodies," Maj. Jacob Shapire of Brookline, Mass., said of the man who had been his closest friend.

"He was a big husky man about six feet three inches tall and weighing about 220 pounds. He knew the Bible backward and forward and he was the sloppiest dressed guy in the regiment. He used to be a polo star at the University of Georgia—he lived in Rome, Ga.

Showdown

By William B. King
Associated Press Staff Writer

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, May 6.—American and British troops, supported by a crushing Allied air offensive which has chased Axis planes from the Tunisian skies, have smashed through enemy lines before Bizerte and Tunis and captured Massicault, 15 miles from Tunis, a special communique announced tonight.

American troops closing on Bizerte, despite strong opposition, deeply penetrated Axis positions in a general assault which began at dawn today, the communique said.

The weakening Axis defenders reeled back toward Bizerte and Tunis under a savage rain of Allied artillery and infantry blows, and Allied planes hammered the retreating Germans and Italians relentlessly.

An Associated Press dispatch from the front said "the pay-off battle" which is a prelude to a European invasion "is underway."

Closing On Ferryville

The American troops were believed to be about 8 miles from Bizerte and closing on Ferryville below the naval port. Ferryville's docks and other vital installations already have been knocked out by American artillery and air bombs.

[The International News Service reported that American forces smashed to within 6 miles west of Bizerte in a massive frontal assault.]

Fighting all along this 40-mile front was going on at nightfall, and the Allied air arm was not giving any rest to the battered Axis troops.

Gen. Henri Giraud, French high commissioner in North Africa, announced in Algiers that there were definite signs the enemy was weakening and reaffirmed his recent assertion that the Axis would be crushed in Africa before the end of the month.

Arnim Reported Flown

On the basis of the present situation the end may come even sooner than that, although the Germans still have strong natural defenses in the rugged terrain of the Cap Bon Peninsula east of Tunis.

(The French Moroccan radio in a broadcast recorded in London said Col. Gen. Jurgen von Arnim, the German commander, had already fled Tunisia, and said Marshal Erwin Rommel had preceded him out of Africa.)

In ground operations there were three outstanding developments:

American troops broke through Axis positions on a broad front after capturing Djebel Chiniti and Djebel Achkel on the northern and southern sides of Lake Achkel. This released a wave of onrushing

'Pay-Off' Battle Rages in Tunisia

Americans beating toward Ferryville and Bizerte.

Farther inland to the south the British First Army drive on Tunis was from two directions, west and southwest.

Tebourba, Axis - held road junction 18 miles west of Tunis, was menaced by one British and one American column, hitting from the northwest and southwest. At last reports the Americans were only 4 miles from this junction, fighting in the hills at Chouigui.

The British column late yesterday stormed and captured the bloody hilltop of Bou Aoukaz to break through toward Tebourba, and were believed close to the town. Hundreds of Allied artillery and planes rocked German defense nests atop Bou Aoukaz, then Tommies swarmed up the hill to take it with bayonets and grenades.

Once it fell, British artillery lifted their explosives onto the next minor line of hills along the road toward Tebourba, and the British infantry plunged ahead. The ferocity of the fighting yesterday was seen in the fact that only 30 Axis prisoners were taken, but the special communique tonight said "many prisoners from a large number of different units" had been taken in later operations.

To observers this indicated the Axis was hurling in its last available manpower levies in a supreme effort.

A military spokesman said the sweeping British capture of Djebel Bou Aoukaz indicated that Axis troops were fighting with less vigor or that the Allies had learned tricks enabling them to beat back the enemy and ward off counterattacks.

Massicault's seizure on the southwestern approaches to Tunis was along the main road to the Tunisian capital, and was an immediate threat to the Germans because the British in that sector have broken into the Tunis plain where their superior numbers of tanks can be employed in the climactic struggle.

The capture of Massicault also threatened to turn the strong Axis mountain positions which thus far have held up the British Eighth Army in the south. French units attacking near Zarbouan, farther south, also were menacing the entire German southern line.

British Eighth Army troops meanwhile reported making a local advance on the line which stretches westward from the coastal marshes of the Gulf of Hammet above Enfidaville. "Patrols penetrated deeply behind the enemy position," the communique said. "The country has been heavily mined."

In reducing the two hilltops near Lake Achkel, the American troops driving on Bizerte had captured more than 300 prisoners, most of them Italians, during yesterday's fighting.

French troops were cooperating with the Americans in the north, most of the French attacking west of Bizerte in close liaison with the Americans who cleaned out the hills on both sides of Lake Achkel.

Five Axis counterattacks intended to delay the American advance toward Ferryville and Bizerte were reported smashed by the forces of Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton, jr.

Highlighting the big Allied ground push was the unparalleled display of Allied aerial might. Dispatches from the British First Army front said the Allied planes were swooping over the Axis positions at seven-minute intervals by day and also dropping flares and occasional bombs by night to make sure the Axis troops could not get any rest.

Before the special bulletin announced air mastery in the skies tonight, a competent source already had reported that most of the Axis fighter planes were based in Sicily and Axis bombers had ceased to operate from Tunisian grounds.

purposes were sunk or damaged, while the harbors of Tunis and La Goulette, near Tunis, were subjected to a terrific pounding.

Tonight's communique said the desert air force blew up a destroyer in the course of sweeps over the gulf of Tunis, while the strategic air force, in attacks on two enemy convoys, sank four barges and four small boats and left a merchant vessel burning.

Italian Harbors Pounded

Strategic air force bombers also gave the harbors at Trapani and Marsala, Sicily, a heavy pounding, scoring direct hits on a number of additional vessels and damaging harbor installations.

Earlier, it was disclosed that nine ships were sunk or damaged by Maj. Gen. Jimmy Doolittle's long-range bombers yesterday in the Sicilian Straits and La Goulette Harbor. One ammunition ship was sent to the bottom in the straits and another damaged in the harbor.

(In London, it was officially announced that during the month of April at least 33 per cent of the Axis shipping that has tried to cross the narrow seas between Sicily and Tunisia has been sent to the bottom.

Enemy Ships Blasted

An Allied Middle East communique earlier in the day told of attacks by long-range fighters on several small enemy vessels in the Aegean Sea north of Crete on Tuesday. One of the enemy ships was abandoned, while other smaller vessels were damaged. None of the attacking planes was lost.

Nearly 100 acres of docks and shipping facilities at Ferryville, a subsidiary naval base for Bizerte, were revealed today to have been devastated by recent bombings.

Reconnaissance photographs also disclosed that the harbor of Bizerte itself is so seriously damaged that unloading of incoming Axis supplies has been seriously handicapped.

Among the enemy planes shot down yesterday were six Italian transports capable of carrying 18 fully equipped men each. The transports, escorted by some 12 to 16 fighter planes, were engaged by medium American Mitchell bombers and Lockheed Lightning fighters. The entire formation of transports was destroyed, as well as two fighters.

Light Bombers Aid in Victory

An Advanced American Bomber Base, Tunisia, May 5 (Delayed) (AP). A large share of the credit for Allied success in Africa goes to a group of American airmen—the crews of A-20 Boston Bombers who have dropped nearly three million pounds of high explosives on German and Italian troops.

Young American airmen who comprise "the flying artillery" have been breaking the back of German resistance.

The airmen at this field have flown many hundred sorties with a loss of less than 1 per cent, a feat equaling that of their big brothers, the much publicized Flying Fortresses.

In the heat of battle, some pilots make as many as three missions a day and the flying field becomes a "sweat shop" obscured by dust clouds as squadrons constantly take off and come in.

A famous father-and-son pair of soldiers, Brig. Gen. Theodore Roosevelt and Capt. Quentin Roosevelt, were cited yesterday for gallantry in action in North Africa.

General Roosevelt, son of the late President Theodore Roosevelt, received an Oak Leaf Cluster representing a second award of the Silver Star, and his son was given the Silver Star

The Silver Star was awarded also to Lt. Col. Charles P. Summerall, of Phoebus, Virginia, son of Gen. Charles P. Sommerall, retired former chief of staff and now head of The Citadel, the military college of South Carolina.

The citation of General Roosevelt reported that when the enemy began a savage counterattack against American forces in an undesignated sector of the line, he went immediately to a forward observation post and remained there until the threat was repulsed, despite intense enemy artillery fire, strafing and dive bombing.

Captain Roosevelt, who was wounded February 21, was cited for voluntarily pushing forward under heavy enemy fire to secure an observation post well in advance of the infantry battalion for which he was serving as artillery liaison officer.

Summerall commanded a field artillery battalion in a combat command which was being forced back by superior enemy forces. The citation said that "with complete disregard for his own welfare" he remained forward with his guns, directing their withdrawal and covering the retirement of other troops. He was subjected during the entire time to heavy tank, artillery, machine gun and aircraft attack.

Australian Fliers Hit 6 Trains in 6 Minutes

London, May 6 (INS).—Australian airmen, flying a new Mosquito bomber on its first daylight mission today, damaged six freight trains in as many minutes, the Air Ministry announced.

took four towns and an airport with only one company of 17 tanks, one platoon of 32 infantry men and four 75 millimeter guns. After reinforcements arrived, he led the attack on Oran itself and it was he who actually made the treaty of peace with the French commander. "I think he was the most outstanding officer in the Army. He struck you as a big dumb sucker when you first saw him, but he had sparks shooting out all over him. He was a great leader. He used the lessons learned from every action to prepare for the next battle. He always said 'In war the school is never over before the armistice is signed.' Another saying of his I remember was, 'Tactics are nothing but aggressiveness and common sense.'

"He was always with any company of his when it went into action, usually in his own tank at the head of a column. There was no such word as defeat in his vocabulary. He was tough-minded but softhearted and I've seen him cry and cry when some of his men were hurt."

Later in the kitchen of a French home with a bitter winter wind pouring through broken window panes, his regimental chaplain, Maj. Harry P. Abbott, of Little Rock, Ark., told me:

"I never saw a man who had a greater presentiment of his own death than Colonel Todd. Once when we were talking about the death of one of the men he said, 'I'm going to be a gone goose, too. I'm not worried about it, but I do know it is coming.'"

"When he led us into action he'd say 'Follow the Daddy Rabbit,'" said Lieutenant—now Captain—Phillip H. Killey, of Vivian, W. Va. "He used it as a symbol to teach us the responsibility of leadership. When he sent us on a mission he'd call the leader and tell him, 'You're the Daddy Rabbit now on this job. Don't let the rest of them forget that—and don't you forget it either.' And when he got through telling you, you were pretty damn glad he had picked you to be the Daddy Rabbit."

Maj. Martin Philipsborn, one of the staff officers most closely associated with Todd, reminisced.

"John married a pretty Summit, N. J., girl less than two months before we left the States," said the Major. "He was very deeply in love. It would have soured a lot of men to have to go off to war so soon but he had a wonderful sense of humor."

Standing by his camouflaged jeep, Private George H. Huber, 26, of Gardenville, N. Y., his driver, told me of Colonel Todd's last hour.

"He was standing on a hill working on a plan to trap the Germans when their artillery started firing. An 88 shell landed less than 15 feet from him and the shrapnel caught him. He just slumped over forward without a sound. No one knew he had been hit at first until they all climbed to their feet and saw him there.

"He got it quick. It didn't hurt. His face was peaceful."

Colonel Held In Shooting

By the Associated Press

Selfridge Field, Mich., May 6.—Headquarters of this Army air base announced today Col. William T. Colman, in command of Selfridge Field since April 23, 1942, has been relieved of the command and is under arrest at the Army's Percy Jones Hospital, Battle Creek, Mich., following the shooting of Pvt. William McRae, a Negro soldier.

COL. COLEMAN

The statement issued by Capt. Richard Ramey, press relations officer at the field, said McRae, whose home is in Morven, N. C., was struck at 1 a. m. Wednesday by a pistol bullet "allegedly fired by" Colonel Colman, then base commander.

Command of the base has been assumed by Col. William B. Wright, who has commanded Barksdale Field, La., for the last eight months.

"The revolver was said to have been fired near the front steps of the base headquarters," the statement said. It added that Colonel Colman "is under observation by medical corps personnel" at the Battle Creek hospital.

New Japanese Thrust Hurled Against China

By Spencer Moosa
Associated Press Staff Writer

Chungking, May 6 (AP).—The Chinese command announced today, only a short while after the military spokesman had warned that the enemy was about to "make an important move," that the Japanese had thrown in a new offensive against the Chinese "rice bowl" in north Hunan and south Hupeh provinces with 7000 to 8000 troops and heavy air support.

The enemy was declared thrown back in the initial phase of this southward thrust below the Yangtze, which presumably was intended to knock out China's principal food crop, but fierce and inconclusive fighting was continuing in his subsequent attacks.

(In Manila, where the Japanese held an elaborately staged holiday on the occasion of the first anniversary of the fall of Corregidor, Japanese Premier Genera. Hideki Tojo declared in a public address broadcast by Japanese propaganda agencies and recorded in the United States by OWI:

("We are now in readiness to deal a thorough and crushing blow at the enemy's armed power. I wish to give expression to the conviction of Japan that she will so effectively crush America and Britain that they will not be able again to extend their baneful tentacles into East Asia."

(The Japanese, he added, "have occupied and secured all strategic areas in Greater East Asia.")

The Chinese also reported continued, but indecisive, fighting in the Taiheng Mountains, in the Shansi-Honan provinces border area.

(The German propaganda agency Transocean claimed that in a 60-hour battle in which the Chinese had defended themselves "most tenaciously" the Japanese had occupied a town called Touchdown in southeastern Shansi Province.

(This action, which was not confirmed in any Allied quarter, was presented as "strategically important.")

The Chinese spokesman in declaring that the Japanese were preparing major attacks suggested the possibility of adventures against India, Australia or even Siberia, but added it was most likely that the enemy would concentrate his forces against China—"try to destroy China's resistance by mopping-up operations in one area after another."

5 Allied Ships Sunk East Of Australia

By C. Yates McDaniel
Associated Press Staff Writer

Allied Headquarters in Australia (Friday), May 7.—Five Allied ships, including one United States merchantman, were sunk recently by Japanese submarines operating in force east of Australia, the high command disclosed today, but most of the crews were saved.

This attempt to cut the Allied "life line" to Australia was foreshadowed by announcement from headquarters of Gen. Douglas MacArthur on May 1 of increased underwater activity in those vital waters.

A spokesman revealed that all five Allied vessels—one medium sized United States freighter, one large and two small Australian freighters and one small Norwegian freighter—were sunk by enemy torpedoes, not by shellfire.

Prompt action by Allied naval patrol craft saved a majority of the crews.

'Continues to Operate'

Defiantly, headquarters announced:

"Our shipping continues to operate in virtually undiminished volume under protection by our naval and aircraft units."

A more favorable note was sounded in today's noon communique concerning land fighting on New Guinea. It reported that an enemy outpost in the area of Salamaua had been surprised and a village seized only 5 miles southwest of that base. This seizure threatened to cut supply lines from Salamaua to Mubo, 12 miles southward.

Fires Started

Over Dutch New Guinea, Allied heavy bombers in a daylight raid started explosions and fires at Manokwari.

At Taberfane on the Aroe Islands, long range fighters staged a surprise early morning attack on the Japanese floatplane base. Nine floatplanes were caught on the beach and were burned. A lugger filled with troops was sunk.

Heavy bombers raided the village of Toeal on the Kai Islands. Medium bombers struck at Dili on Timor, firing the airdrome area.

McKelvy Unit Honored in Solomons Fighting

McKELVY

Lieut. Col. William M. McKelvy, jr., U. S. M. C., who is on sick leave at his Washington home, led the Third Battalion, First Marines, in the action on Guadalcanal for which the outfit has been cited, the Navy Department announced yesterday.

Colonel McKelvy's unit was one of two honored by Maj. Gen. A. A. Vandegrift for "outstanding performance of duty in combat with Japanese forces on Guadalcanal Island."

The battalion was cited for having established a position on the Matanikau River October 9, 1942, and making it impregnable to Jap attacks. Again on October 21 the battalion was reported to have sighted and, with the help of another group, to have destroyed a 15-ton tank, after the Marines had been subjected to heavy fire. Again on October 23 the battalion, with help of other units, and after being subjected to heavy fire, destroyed nine of the 15-ton tanks as well as supporting infantry. Then on October 24 the men repulsed light attacks by the enemy.

Born into the Marine Corps, Colonel McKelvy, 43, is a son of the late Col. William N. McKelvy, sr., while his son, William N. 3d., has passed the Naval aviation cadet examination and expects to join the corps when he is 18 in August.

A graduate of the Naval Academy in 1921, Colonel McKelvy entered the Marine Corps the same year and seryed in Nicaragua, China and the tropics. He landed on Guadalcanal with the first batch of Marines and recently received the Navy Cross for distinguished service there.

His family resides at 3525 Davenport Street Northwest.

Berlin Has Air-Raid Towers

By the Associated Press

The Berlin radio gave the German people yesterday a description of Berlin's new antiaircraft artillery towers.

A transocean military correspondent was quoted as calling the towers "gigantic" and saying that each one contained as much ferro-concrete as 15 kilometers—about 10 miles—of the West Wall.

"This scarcely believeable amount," the broadcast said, "is explained by the immense thickness of the walls, and the strength of the foundation of the guns and of the ceiling of bombproof rooms."

The broadcast asserted the towers also provided protection for valued works of art. It went on:

"Even bombs of the heaviest caliber cannot do any harm to these towers. These towers have twin guns. New calibers and new kinds of ammunition were developed which make defense against high and low flying enemies possible.

"Hilter youth boys have provided needed assistant crews for these guns. Most of them are between 15 and 16 and are well educated."

26 Seamen Survive 42-Day Ordeal in Drifting Lifeboat

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, May 6.—Boatswain James L. Tucker thanked his foresight today for the fact he—as well as 25 other merchant seamen—were still alive following 42 days and nights in a lifeboat after their ship was sunk.

"You have no idea how long 42 days and nights can be until you spend it in a 22-foot lifeboat with 25 other men in the middle of the Atlantic," Tucker said.

He estimated the boat drifted more than 2500 miles.

Tucker, a resident of Baltimore, said his ship was sunk in the South Atlantic last February by a German submarine, with 54 out of a crew of 57 getting away safely—a score of them on emergency life rafts which Tucker had ordered built a few days before.

"When we counted noses we found there were 26 men in our little lifeboat," Tucker related. "We were all sick from gas fumes of the explosion, and during the first night we got separated from the other lifeboats.

"We were all sick for the next couple of days, but finally came around all right and got down to the business of getting back to shore."

The 26 organized themselves into watches, assigned duties to each man and operated the lifeboat just as if it had been a ship.

"We had a compass and we knew where we wanted to go," Tucker said. "We rigged sails and we rowed.

"We prayed, too. Every day at noon we had two minutes of silence for those men who wanted to pray. Most of us wanted to.

"After a couple of weeks out there alone the biggest problem became keeping up morale. We tried to keep everyone busy and we organized our spare time just as well as our tricks on duty."

One man made a deck of cards from the wrapping paper on the emergency rations. Another organized a forum in which the men argued about everything.

When rations began running low, Tucker related, one of the crew rigged up a gig by lashing two knives to an oar, and after two days of unsuccessful effort finally stabbed a 35-pound fish and flopped it into the boat. A fire was built in a bailing bucket and the fish cooked over it.

Then one day the men saw a ship, but it went by. On the forty-second day, Tucker related, the men saw land and a coastal ship picked them up and took them to Santos, Brazil.

Sidelight on the War

U. S. Air Ace in China Killed

Grants Pass, Oreg., May 6 (AP).—Capt. John Hampshire, ace of the American Air Force in China, was killed in aerial combat May 2, John Hampshire, sr. of Grants Pass, the flier's father, was notified by the War Department today.

A May 2 dispatch from an advanced United States airdrome in Hunan Province, China, credited Hampshire with shooting down a Japanese raider, running his total to 12 confirmed victories. It was part of an action in which P-40 Warhawks intercepted a flight of 30 Japanese raiders and shot down 14 of them.

Hampshire was described in the dispatch as the leading American ace in China.

Dutch Riots Reported

London, May 6 (AP).—Dutch monitors reported tonight the German-controlled Netherlands radio, in broadcasts during the past three days, had given hints of an outbreak of anti-Nazi violence in Holland which had been quelled by forces armed with machineguns, resulting in casualties, the Dutch news agency Aneta said.

One broadcast spoke of "a short fierce action," while another told the Netherlands population it was futile to "fight yourself to death in the fire of German machineguns."

Lone Survivor Says Plane Hit Mountain

By the Associated Press

Reykjavik, Iceland, May 6—Giving the first detailed account of the plane crash in which Lieut. Gen. Frank M. Andrews and 13 others were killed Monday, the lone survivor of the accident said tonight the craft hit a mountain at 4:15 p. m. and that he believed all died instantly.

"The visibility was only about 40 feet and we had passed several peninsulas along the coast," said the survivor, Staff Sergt. George A. Eisel, "but that last one was just too high. It happened so suddenly and nobody was expecting anything."

"I was the rear gunner," added Sergeant Eisel, a thrice-decorated veteran of both the European and African fronts, "my turret was thrown right into the middle of the plane, or what remained of it. There I was for 26 hours before a rescue party found me. It took them an hour to dig me out."

Eisel, whose wife, Iva, lives in Columbus, Ohio, said that the plane had had no radio communication with the land base from 3 o'clock on, but found the airfield. It was decided to try another field, however, because of the poor visibility.

From the conversation Eisel said he heard on the intercommunications between the pilot and navigator they could have landed the first time, but decided to go to the second airfield. "But there it was impossible to land, so we went back to the first one," he said.

Eisel said that General Andrews, who often piloted his own plane, had taken the controls for part of the trip over the Atlantic but the captain "had taken over when we crashed."

Sergeant Eisel was not badly hurt. His foot was cut and he also suffered small cuts on his left hand.

"I thought I would be burned inside the plane, but luckily rain started to fall and put out the fire," he said. "Then I started worrying I would not be found until dead, and I was terribly thirsty and hungry before the rescue party came."

Eisel is the holder of the purple heart, the air medal, and the Distinguished Flying Cross. He estimates he has shot down seven enemy planes, and damaged 10 or 12.

program should sit on it and discuss their problems together regularly and frequently. Each must be made to feel a great sense of responsibility for the entire program with no diminution of his responsibility for that part directly under his control."

Must Be Living Reality

But first, declared the committee, "the strong, over-all authority of the War Production Board must be made a living reality." Nelson, it continued, "must be ready to make decisions and to enforce them over the objections of aggressive department heads."

"The democratic right of public expression had passed the point of useful exchange" the committee stated, when Jeffers suggested that either he or Patterson should be required to resign after the Undersecretary accused the rubber director of so delaying aviation gasoline production as to threaten the success of the summer air offensive over Europe and after Undersecretary of the Navy James V. Forrestal "entered the fracas, towing into the scene the long-delayed escort-vessel program."

The row was precipitated by Patterson, the committee observed, despite the fact that "the armed forces failed by a wide margin to anticipate wartime needs for aviation gasoline. As for the Navy, the report added, it was not in a position to place "the bulk" of its escort-vessel orders until the month following Nelson's decision to give Jeffers a priority ahead of the gasoline program.

Donay Charges Mistreatment Before Trial

Detroit, May 6 (AP).—Theodore Donay charged in Federal Court today that he was harshly mistreated at Milan (Mich.) Federal penitentiary where he was held awaiting trial on a charge of misprision of treason.

The tall-saber-scarred defendant, accused of having withheld knowledge of the aid which Max Stephan, convicted traitor, gave to a Nazi flier, Oberleutnant Hans Peter Krug, fleeing from a Canadian prison camp, said he collapsed several times under the treatment during the many months he was confined at Milan prison.

When Government attorneys introduced a letter intimating that he has a sister in Germany who is employed by Reichmarshal Herman Goering, Donay sobbed, "it might be the life of my mother and sister. Both are in the hands of Germany and this may mean their death."

Made Army Chief In European Area

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

LIEUT. GEN. JACOB L. DEVERS.

Treasury Opens Fight on Ruml Plan

Paul indicated, is the House-approved bill which would put about 90 per cent of the taxpayers on a current basis, excusing all 1942 levies for about 75 per cent of them by abating the first 19 per cent of taxes assessed under the present law.

Both these measures, as well as the Ruml-Carlson plan, would put most taxpayers on a current collection basis by providing for a 20 per cent withholding tax on salaries and wages.

Asked by Senator Johnson (Democrat) of Colorado if the Treasury preferred no bill at all to the Ruml-Carlson proposal, Paul took so much time to think about his answer that there was general laughter when Senator Vandenberg (Republican) of Michigan remarked that he "hadn't heard clearly" what the Treasury general counsel said.

"I wouldn't want to answer that question now," Paul replied. "It has never been put to me that way before and I want to think about it. There are a number of things to be weighed."

Chairman George (Democrat) of Georgia commented that the nub of the question for the committee was "how much we're going to pay" to get tax collections on a current basis.

He said he hoped the committee could get to work today settling the major issues involved, after hearing Colin F. Stam, chief of the congressional taxation staff.

His desire for speed was echoed by Vandenberg, who evidenced no desire for a public reply to Paul's attack on the Ruml-Carlson measure, supported by Vandenberg and other Republicans on the committee.

"I think the hearings are all but through right now," Vandenberg said.

Devers Succeeds Gen. Andrews

vers showed "an immense capacity for organization and administration" as commander of the armored forces, and had been prepared for the new post by a recent trip of inspection and study throughout the European, North African and Middle-East theaters.

The War Secretary also made it plain that the death of General Andrews would not delay projected operations in Europe, declaring:

"General Devers is thoroughly cognizant with present and future plans."

Sees Noose Tightening

The War Secretary, turning to the current operations in Tunisia, said that "the noose is tightening around the Axis army." He warned, however, that the enemy still has the bulk of its Army intact and capable of "stubborn resistance." And there is no sign of any large-scale evacuation.

"The success in Tunisia," Stimson continued, "has been made possible because of the almost perfect coordination of the American, British and French ground and air forces."

The new commander of American troops in the European Theater is a 55-year-old native of York, Pa. He was a noted athlete at West Point and upon graduation in 1909 entered the Field Artillery.

Devers' Army service until 1940 was with artillery. He was recognized as one of that branch's most outstanding officers and in the fall of 1940 was given command of an infantry division. His dynamic organizing and leadership qualities made him one of the marked men of the expanding Army.

In August, 1941, he was given command of the Armored Force, although he had no experience in tanks. His success in that job won him the present assignment.

Hold-Line Order Is Called Unworkable

ties and inequalities and to "aid in the effective prosecution of the war."

Dissatisfaction with the WLB also developed on another front yesterday when John Green, president of the C. I. O. Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers, left a session of the WLB Shipbuilding Stabilization Commission in protest after his union was denied a union shop in a Main shipyard which it already had, in favor of a maintenance of membership arrangement.

It was indicated that Green did not plan to return to commission sessions until its membership is reconstituted and present policies altered.

The labor protests are expected to be aired at forthcoming executive board meetings of the C. I. O. on May 14, and the A. F. of L. on May 17. It seemed evident that the labor members did not propose to stay on WLB after that date without assurances that present stringent wage controls would be modified.

Board officials acknowledged that the question was complicated by the unsettled status of the coal wage case. Any change in present regulations might provide the loophole that Mine Leader John L. Lewis needs to secure a major victory.

The meeting with Byrnes took place yesterday after WLB Chairman William H. Davis and Public Member George W. Taylor conferred with the economic stabilizer Wednesday on a detailed memorandum which the WLB had presented to Byrnes requesting changes in the April 8 order.

WLB objections to present wage policies are based on the contention that the board should have discretion to make wage adjustments in special situations where present wage scales are clearly "out of line." Much of this discretion was taken away from WLB and given to Byrnes by the "hold the line" order.

Board members are expected to press for an early solution of the difficulties, because the present situation has slowed down the WLB in handling its vast backlog of cases.

WLB has also decided to be as liberal as possible in applying the existing rules. Thus, the board is prepared to approve wage differentials for night shift work and payment for vacations, even if an individual's wages are otherwise frozen by the regulations.

The WLB memorandum on the "hold the line" order called for easing up of the present virtual wage freeze by (1) permitting abnormally low rates to rise to "most frequently recurring" levels, (2) continuing industry-wide wage stabilization projects "to straighten out the line," (3) making some adjustment for 17,000 cases pending when the order was issued, (4) permitting special adjustments for industries which have converted their operations to a wartime basis, but find themselves with wage scales which are below standard for the new activity.

WLB Resumes Coal Study; Lewis Absent

The War Labor Board's coal panel resumed hearings on the coal wage dispute yesterday, doing the best it could in the absence of Mine Union Leader John L. Lewis, who snubbed the board once again by failing to show up.

To rid its deliberations of a possible curse of being "one-sided," the panel took the following steps:

1. Opened its hearings to the press to give the general public as well as the United Mine Workers information on what went on. Such panel hearings normally are opened only to board officials and the parties to the dispute.

2. Prepared to take testimony from expert witnesses, possibly including officials of the Department of interior, which is now operating the country's mines under a Presidential seizure order, and officials of the Office of Price Administration to testify on the cost of living.

3. Directed Nathan P. Feinsinger, University of Wisconsin professor and panel assistant, to act as Lewis' advocate by indexing the transcript of coal negotiating sessions in New York which were held prior to certification of the case to WLB. Feinsinger was instructed by Panel Chairman Morris L. Cooke to read into the record Lewis' arguments countering any points made by coal operators.

4. "So that the interests of the absent mine workers will be further protected," Cooke ordered transmitted to the mine union officials a transcript of each day's hearings.

Cooke expressed the hope that hearings in both the bituminous and anthracite cases could be concluded within two weeks. It was evident that the board will not be able to reach its decision before the 15-day truce to the general coal strike has expired.

Latchstring Outs

"We hope before our sittings are concluded," Cooke said, "that the representatives of the miners may see the advantage of coming here and telling us, in as much detail as they like, the miners' side of the story. To use a Quaker expression, 'the latchstring is on the outside of our door.'"

Charles O'Neill, representing the Northern operators, and former Senator Edward R. Burke, representing Southern operators, made brief opening presentations and began reviewing arguments advanced during the New York sessions.

"To the fullest extent possible," Burke assured the three-man panel, "we will try to put the whole picture before the panel in view of the fact that our opponents are not here to make their own case."

Greater "Take Home"

O'Neill presented a number of exhibits to the panel to demonstrate that miners' "take home" wages have advanced more rapidly than the cost of living since the start of the war. Daily wages increased 28 per cent and weekly wages 73.1 per cent since October, 1940, compared to a rise of 24.24 per cent in the cost of maintaining a family of four in coal towns between January, 1941, and January, 1943, O'Neill said.

"We have reached the conclusion," Burke said, "considering the hourly rate and the weekly take home, that the miners are not entitled to any increase at all."

Lewis' demands for portal-to-portal pay, payment for maintenance of miners' cap lights, charges for explosives and blacksmithing charges were also discussed.

House Takes Action to Revive Rep. Smith's Antistrike Bill

A House move to revive the old Smith antistrike bill, which overwhelmingly passed the House the week before Pearl Harbor but died in the Senate, was under way last night.

Representative Howard W. Smith (Democrat) of Virginia has reintroduced the measure and is expected to revive it either in committee or in the House as a rider on the Senate-passed Connally plant-seizure bill.

President's right to seize struck

The Connally bill, confirming the war plants, and outlawing strikes in Government-owned industries, meanwhile was referred to the House Military Affairs Committee.

Chairman Andrew J. May said he thought the committee should proceed with the Connally bill without hearings, inasmuch as members already have exhaustively considered the Nation's manpower problems. The bill probably will be considered at the next regular meeting of the committee on Tuesday.

Declines Comment

Although Smith declined comment on the expected House move to put "teeth" in the Connally bill, he is understood to have conferred yesterday with Chairman May and others who will have a part in framing the House version of the Senate passed bill.

The original Smith antistrike bill did not outlaw strikes but extended arbitration machinery and prescribed Government - supervised elections and a cooling-off period before a strike could be called in any war industry. An initial 30 days' notice of intention to strike would have to be filed with the Secretary of Labor. Arbitration machinery would follow the lines of the Railway Mediation Act, with a similar "cooling off" period. Any labor union that struck before prescribed methods for settlement were exhausted would be deprived of all benefits under the National Labor Relations Act.

Other features of the Smith bill which provoked controversy at the time that led to the bill's death in the Senate Labor Committee included provision for Government registration and financial accounting by labor unions.

Whether Smith's bill would be offered as an amendment to the Connally bill in the Military Committee, or the move made on the House floor as a substitute for whatever bill the committee reports, was uncertain last night. Smith is a member of the House Rules Committee, which could provide a rule making his amendment in order in the House.

Other Manifestations

Resurging Congressional sentiment for strike curbs, following the United Mine Workers bituminous coal walk-out, meanwhile was heard in another House quarter. Before the Sam Hobbs Judiciary subcommittee, Representative Wright Patman (Democrat) of Texas urged action on his bill providing criminal punishment for those who conspire to delay production in any war plant.

Patman said he thought the people are getting "disgusted" with Congressional failure to act against strikes.

"We are drafting their sons into the armed forces by the hundreds of thousands, but so far we haven't done a thing to prevent work stoppages in industries which are the Army's lifeline," said the Texan.

Patman contended that the Connally bill is too limited, applying as it does only to the relatively narrow field of Government-owned plants. His own bill would impose a fine of $5000 or imprisonment up to five years for conspiring to prevent, stop, hinder or interrupt any work essential to the war effort, in industry or in Government operation.

The Texas Congressman said he had launched a petition in Congress to force a report on his bill.

Trade Act Extension Proposed

taken on this strategy but a Republican House conference has been called by Minority Leader Joseph W. Martin, jr., for Tuesday morning.

Chairman Doughton's majority report to the House yesterday left no doubt of the Administration's line of argument in pressing for passage. The report opposed any alteration that would create "the slightest basis for doubt concerning our determination or ability to carry forward an effective policy of international economic cooperation."

The dissenting report by the 10-man Republican minority said that to make the bill a postwar policy test would "exaggerate its importance in relation to the larger questions of world reconstruction and security upon which the Congress eventually will have to pass—Mr. Hull to the contrary nothwithstanding."

"No foreign nation," argued the minority, "has the right to assume—despite the invitation of the Secretary of State to do so—that Congress, by failing to extend, or by amending the Trade Treaty Act, is thereby taking even a first step toward repudiating this Nation's announced policy of friendly cooperation with other nations in reestablishing order, security and prosperity when victory is won.

Gen. Giraud Urges 3-Front Attack

Algiers, May 6 (AP).—The Allies must attack Europe simultaneously from the North Sea Channel, from the Mediterranean and on the Russian front, Gen. Henri Honore Giraud asserted in an interview given to Jacques Villesolin of the Independent French agency as published today in the Algiers weekly Tam.

"There is a certain reaction of one front on the others," he said. "Europe is at the moment a fortress. If it is to be penetrated it must be attacked, and attacked at several points."

Gene Tierney Leaving Screen for Motherhood

Hollywood, May 6 (AP).—Actress Gene Tierney today reported, through her studio, her retirement from the screen pending birth of a child next October.

The actress now is at Junction City, Kans., to be near her husband, Pvt. Oleg Cassini, attending an officer's training school at Fort Riley.

Backed by Farley, Monroe Says

New York, told The Post: "Frankly I can't remember him," pointing out that he had recommended a number of people for jobs in the past, but that he had been out of office for three years.

As for the Boston home, in comparison with which he said the big red house on R Street was a "shack," Monroe said that he owed some back taxes on it, as the result of property reassessment.

Caustic Comment

"I really must have been making millions as a war profiteer if I'm losing my home," he observed caustically. The garage of the Boston home, he said, was as big as the house on R Street, and the Boston home is "a lovely place."

Meanwhile, a subcommittee of the House Military Affairs Committee kept the ghost of Monroe whirring around the Capital by calling a sudden session to which had been summoned Allyn K. Suttell, comptroller and treasurer of the Narragansett Machine Co. of Pawtucket, R. I.

Another vice president at $12,000 a year of the Narragansett Company, Suttell testified, is Norman T. Bolles, and upon whom Monroe stressed to the committee Wednesday, he personally would like to perform some violent deed. Monroe blamed his present plight on a "whispering campaign" enlivened by a mysterious individual who, he said, called Republican Senator Styles Bridges of New Hampshire on the telephone to tell the Senator "a job" was going to be done on Monroe. And this person, Monroe claimed, was none other than Bolles.

For reasons best know to itself, but which promised fireworks later, the subcommittee led Suttell into testifying that Bolles purchased all of the common stock of the Narragansett Company for $5000 from Stanley P. Woodard of New York. Further, Suttell said, Bolles worked this coup with funds from the Narragansett Company with which, at that time, he was not connected.

Suttell testified that the Narragansett Co.—of which he said former Gov. Robert A. Hurley of Connecticut, is also a $12,000-a-year vice president, who spends on the average about a day a week attending affairs of the company—borrowed two million dollars from the Federal Reserve Bank of Boston in March, 1942, to pay off a loan of the same size to a Providence, R. I., investment trust company. Suttell said the Federal Reserve Bank loan made to Narragansett, now engaged in war work, was guaranteed by the War Department.

Hours of testimony and introduction by the committee counsel of bank checks, photostated letters, affidavits, and indictments failed to reveal why Monroe has a direct bearing on the case, other than he is acquainted with Bolles, and a former agent of the company, Albert Bennett Fey.

Senate Approves Civil Funds for War Department

With funds for the proposed Florida barge canal conspicuously missing, a $63,600,000 appropriation for civil functions of the War Department was passed yesterday by the Senate and returned to the House.

Principal items in the appropriation, which passed by a voice vote, were $35,700,000 for river and harbor work and $14,000,000 for Mississippi River flood control.

Backers of the Florida barge canal, which was turned down 17 to 14 by the Senate Appropriations Committee, had expressed their intention of carying the fight for the project to the floor. The move did not materialize. They had asked $44,000,000 for the job. This was trimmed to $28,000,000 by an Appropriations Subcommittee, and later the full committee rejected the appropriation altogether.

Crippled Sailor Does His Bit at Torpedo Plant

His bullet-riddled body no longer capable of withstanding the rigors of the life of a Merchant Marine sailor, Ralph D. Brown, 33, of Fairhaven, Alexandria, survivor of 15 enemy attacks at sea, victim of two torpedo sinkings, still gives his services to the war effort by working at the Navy torpedo plant.

BROWN

He received his disabling wounds as his ice-sheathed cargo vessel was attacked while making its way with vital war supplies to Russia.

Planes machine-gunned his convoy, he said.

But then, this was the fifteenth attack he had withstood and his star of fortune still held its power for while both legs and his left side were badly wounded, he still survives.

Lucky at Start

The first time his ship was sent to the bottom by a Nazi torpedo he was lucky. He succeeded in getting into a lifeboat which was finally picked up by another vessel.

The second time was a different story, however, for his ship was hit by two torpedoes, her boilers exploded and she sank in 38 seconds.

He leaped into 34-degree water with a life jacket, but saw near him a fellow sailor, Ralph Multer of Portsmouth, Ohio, who had lost a leg in the explosion and was drowning.

Brown fastened his own life jacket around the injured man and swam to a piece of ice box floating nearby. He remained partly submerged in the icy water for two and a half hours when he was picked up by a British ship.

Multer also was rescued and is still confined to a seamen's hospital.

Married in March

Brown said he has made trips to England, Iran, Scotland, Wales and Russia since his enlistment in June, 1942. In March of this year he was married to the former Kathleen Craven of High Point, N. C.

Lean, hard-bitten, with eyes sunk deep in his face from staring at glaring seas, for the telltale wake of a periscope, he still looks fit despite his stiff leg.

"I know it is not true," he said, "but to me there seemed to be literally a thousand planes attacking our convoy when I was wounded. The air was filled with bullets and flying fragments of shattered steel from our own ship."

Despite her wounds and her heavy coating of ice, his ship reached her Russian port and then was able to make her way back to the United States, he said.

Danny Stanton Slain in Tavern

Chicago, May 6 (AP).—Danny Stanton, one-time Capone mobster and for 20 years listed on police records as a hoodlum, was killed in a South Side tavern last night, shot in the back of the head by a gunman who also slew one of his companions and wounded another man.

Henderson Accepts Job In Research

By Edwin D. Gritz
Post Staff Writer

Former Price Administrator Leon Henderson will go back to work May 10 as a board chairman of the Research Institute of America, Inc., he announced yesterday.

While salary was not mentioned, in the announcement it was said he will be paid somewhat more than the $12,000 a year he received as price administrator.

Besides serving as chairman of the institute's board of editors, Henderson also said he would do a limited amount of economic consultation with private groups, and engage in radio, writing and lecturing activities. He will make his office at the Washington branch of the Institute whose headquarters are in New York.

The 47-year-old former price boss, whose reign was marked by rough-and-tumble skirmishes with critics in and out of the Government, became a private citizen last January when Prentiss M. Brown, former Michigan Senator, took over his post.

The Institute, founded in 1935, supplies business men and manufacturers with business information and lately has been specializing in war controls, taxation, social security, and postwar planning. Its research facilities are also used by Government agencies.

The estimated production of cold-packed foods in 1942 was 823,931,000 pounds.

Hero From Pacific Called to Ceremony

LIEUT. COMDR. SIMPLER

Commander Simpler Thrice Decorated For Battle Service

A stocky, hard hitting Naval flier whose fighting exploits in the Solomon Islands pale his legendary survival of the U. S. S. Macon disaster and his membership in the Caterpiller Club during 1935, Sunday afternoon will take a prominent part in the presentation exercises of the Government Girl warplanes.

He is Lieut. Comdr. Le Roy Simpler, twice winner of the Navy Cross and wearing also the Distinguished Flying Cross, former squadron commander of the famed Fighting Squadron Five of Gudalcanal and South Seas renown, presently on duty in the Office of the Chief Navay Operations in Washington.

Commander Simpler commented yesterday on the F4U Vought Corsair, which will be presented in the ceremonies to the Navy by Government employees.

"It is about the smoothest job I know of and one of the safest. I've looked it over pretty carefully—in fact flown it. About the only thing a pilot has to look forward to who flies one is dying of old age . . ."

One of the outstanding air fighters of all times, Commander Simpler's odyssey, about which he is modest, leads from the taranquil acres of rural Delaware where a youth he watched the hawks and the gulls wheel above him, to the Solomons and eventually to the Nation's Capital, now his home.

Simpler's squadron and its exploits in the South Seas is a thrilling chapter in the expanding, somewhat incredible history of American aviation in combat.

The commander himself personifies the sturdy, hardy stock which today continues to follow the pioneers' instinct of blazing trails. And the one left by his famous outfit is exhilirating.

Of it the Navy Department said:

"Fighting Five's 'Striking Eagle' struck forcibly in the Solomons campaign. The squadron participated in every major action. It destroyed 77 enemy aircraft, probably 13 others, and assisted in the demolishing of three.

"On August 7-8, when the Solomons were invaded, Fighting Five destroyed 13 enemy bombers, damaged 2 more bombers and 2 Zeros, and aided in the destruction of 2 other bombers. On August 24, when the enemy launched a determined attack, Fighting Five destroyed 19 Japanese aircraft, including 14 dive bombers."

Until early September the Striking Eagle operated from a carrier. Then it flew into Guadalcanal operating from that and other land bases until relieved. The squadron shot down 45 enemy planes and got 6 probables during this period.

Shortly after this Commander Simpler received high praise from Admiral William F. Halsey, South Pacific area commanding officer. The message said in part:

". . . Although operating under difficult and hazardous conditions, the many tasks assigned you were carried out with marked success as proven by the great number of enemy losses as compared to our own . . ."

The Striking Eagle squadron had lost 12 pilots in combat.

Always interested in flying, the 38-year-old naval hero received his wings at the Naval Air Station at Pensacola, Fla., in March, 1931, and was assigned to Scouting Squadron Five, attached to the U. S. S. Marblehead. He was 26.

"They'd call that old for a flier now," the commander mused.

Long before his country or the world knew of it, Commander Simpler was a top flight hero to Barbara. Barbara is the 11-year-old daughter of the aviator who set a mark for all ambitious airmen to shoot at.

On February 24, 1943, Secretary of the Navy Knox on behalf of the President of the United States presented Lt. Com. Simpler with the Navy Cross and the Distinguished Flying Cross.

The official citation accompanying the Navy Cross:

"For extraordinary heroism and distinguished service in the line of his profession as a commander of a fighting squadron during action against enemy Japanese aircraft in the Solomon Islands area from September 11 to October 6, 1942.

"Leading his squadron daringly and fearlessly against overwhelming formations of enemy aircraft, Lt. Com. Simpler contributed to the destruction of 17 Japanese planes, and personally shot down one Zero-type fighter.

"Vigorously pressing forward attacks in the face of enemy opposition, the squadron under Lt. Com. Sempler's command accounted for 35 aircraft during its service in this area. His superb leadership and courageous devotion to duty were in keeping with the highest traditions of the United States Naval Service."

His other citations—for the D. F. C. and the Gold Star—were terse, unadorned, official. But they tell of similar epics.

And Lt. Com. Simpler, hearty, brown-haired and husky, is here to tell of them himself if he has a mind to. . . Maybe he will Sunday.

O'Rourke, an honor guard representing the Securities and Exchange Commission.

Hundreds of letters from over the country have been received along with individual contributions for the purchase of the warplanes.

The most recent of these was from 6-year-old Jane Magruder Ericson of Kirkwood, Mo., who when she heard of the Government Girl campaign, sent in her name with a $1 bill to help the campaign over the top.

More than 156,000 individual Government workers last night had contributed to the purchase of the planes, which already are in nearby security awaiting the colorful christening ceremony.

Craft Stand Ready

The Navy's premier fighter, a Vought F4U Corsair, and the Army's champion, a P-51 Mustang, both fully equipped, ready for their inevitable mission over enemy lines, stand poised, ready and waiting.

Latest of the Navy's air might, the compact, sleek Corsair, deadly sky raider, is acclaimed by experts as one of the most potent crafts of its kind in the world.

Powered by a 2000-horsepower Pratt & Whitney radial engine, the F4U, manufactured by the Vought-Sikorsky Corp., has a maximum speed of more than 400 miles per hour.

Designed especially for condltions which have arisen in World War II, the Corsair, with its inverted gull wings, its long and narrow fuselage, carries every modern designer's hope with it.

As a companion to the Navy Corsair, the Army's Mustang, proven already in the air over Europe, has thus far vanquished the Nazi's formidable and No. 1 fighter—the Focke-Wulf—on a number of occasions.

The Mustang is a single-seater, single-engine, all-metal monoplane of low wing, cantilever type, and carries "heavy armament." They have been practically shot to pieces in encounters with enemy aircraft and still able to make a landing.

Very Fast Ship

The London Daily Express referred to it as "the fastest of its kind in the world."

"You may say," said an Army Air Force official yesterday, "that in flight the Mustang is little more than a blur. You may say that it has an Allison 1150-horsepower engine, liquid cooled, because you can hear it roar . . . You can say that it is fast—what the Army calls "in the 400-mile-per-hour class."

And it may be said in behalf of the 156,500 Government employes in Washington who purchased the planes for the Army and Navy that both Government Girls will be watched with unusual interest.

Meanwhile, Metropolitan Police, Park Police, guards from the Army, Navy and Marines, who will be posted to help with the throng which will fill the Ellipse, guard the warplanes and help with the crowd, all have received final instructions.

Park employes are completing the site for the grandstands and bandstands. "Final arrangements will be completed on schedule," Capt. Jerry Lawler announced.

Chinese Envoy, General Speak At Bond Rally

War bond sales at the Treasury Department-Saturday Evening Post rally continued to climb steadily yesterday, following visits from Chinese Ambassador Wei Tao-Ming and Maj. Gen. P. T. Mow, commander of the Chinese Air Force, who spoke before several hundred persons at Hecht's. A total of $820,000 in bonds has been sold at the rally to date.

Ambassador Wei, accompanied by Madame Wei, spoke briefly but effectively at 4 in the afternoon, while shoppers and bond-buyers interrupted their activities temporarily to give them an enthusiastic welcome.

Our Chinese allies, he pledged, will never cease the fight against Japanese aggression until the menace to the Four Freedoms is destroyed. The purchase of war bonds in this country helps both that fight and the determined spirit of the fighters, he said.

Major General Mow, describing several of the decisive battles in which the Chinese Air Force has participated, told his audience that the decrease of Japanese air activities over China might be "partly attributed to the organization of the American Volunteer Group," the famous "Flying Tigers."

With American production of aircraft increasing daily, he said, "I hope the day will not be far off when Allied planes in good quantities and operated from land bases in China, sail the clear skies of the Pacific to blast out the final threat of the Japanese militarism, once and for all."

D. C. Airman Missing In Alaskan Theater

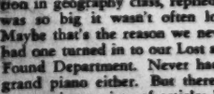
Anybody Wanna Buy A Duct:

Better look at that again, mate. We don't mean one of those things with wings that quacks and flies and looks so enticing on the table—if you can get one on your ration card. We're talking about DUCTS, the conduits in which are placed the cables that carry electric current.

They're mighty important in Street Railway operation. In fact, if it weren't for ducts and cables we couldn't turn a car wheel. Our Street Cars would be as dead as door nails or as Buses without gasoline. Our investment in ducts and cables amounts to over $1,000,000. Last year alone, we spent $60,000 on additions to that part of our system.



Where Is The Elephant Found:

The school boy, asked that question in geography class, replied it was so big it wasn't often lost. Maybe that's the reason we never had one turned in to our Lost and Found Department. Never had a grand piano either. But there is an amazing variety of articles left on Street Cars and Buses. In 24 hours the number amounts to something respectable. Multiply it by 365 and the answer is lost articles by the thousands. If you miss something after a Car or Bus trip, give that Department a ring, Michigan 6363, Extension 503. Or visit it any day except Sundays or holidays between 8 A.M. and 6 P.M. It is located at 1416 F St., N. W., for your convenience.

Synthetic Rubber Gets Airline Test

When Flight 10 of American Air Lines landed at the National Airport here last night it was disclosed that extensive tests are being made to determine the value of synthetic rubber tires on airliners.

The first and only passenger plane to use these tires has now completed over 500 hours of flying.

"As far as the ground maintenance crews are concerned, it does not matter what the tires are made of. All we're interested in is their quality and durability," Donno Breeding, chief mechanic of American Air Lines, said. "These synthetic tires are holding up in excellent condition and from all indications will outlast natural rubber by about 20 per cent."

The most important factor, however, is that a successful substitute for our decreasing stockpiles of natural rubber has been found.

The new product has already been proved to be resistant to oil deterioration, chipping and cracking, the main drawbacks of using natural rubber in aviation, Breeding said.

Imagine putting several tons' pressure on a piece of rubber, then suddenly scraping it over rough concrete at a speed of 90 miles an hour and you have an idea of the tremendous wear put on an airliner's tires. The heat generated by this contact is often sufficient to vulcanize the tire to its mounting, said Breeding.

Several rubber companies, including B. F. Goodrich, have approached American Air Lines officials asking for assistance in tests and it is expected that within a short time a dozen or more synthetic tires will be installed on different planes. As yet no tail wheels have been tested.

Airline engineers will not be making tests of comparison between the composition of natural rubber and synthetic rubber, their prime interest being wearing qualities.

Four "Ameripol" synthetic tires were recently installed on a station wagon used in maintaining airway radio ground stations. It was not until they had traveled 29,519 miles over dirt and gravel roads, covering every kind of highway and byway in the country, that it became necessary to retread them.

It is said to be impossible to make a product exactly like natural rubber, but chemists have made material that is very similar and in many respects better. Natural rubber is made up of hydrogen and carbon atoms. So is petroleum and important components of coal.

To make the synthetic product, it is necessary to juggle the atoms in petroleum until they assume a form similar to rubber, chemists say.

Victory Baby 1st Deadline Set Today

Mothers with Victory Babies in their homes, take note: Today at noon is the deadline for first entries in The Post plan to tell servicemen husbands about the offspring they have never seen.

There are hundreds of men who have left their Washington homes for battlefronts in Guadalcanal, or Iceland, or Alaska, or North Africa, and dozens of these have become fathers without ever having been able to see their newborn babies. Some are not even sure whether it's a boy or a girl.

For instance there is Staff Sergt. William L. Donnelly, a radio operator aboard a bomber in North Africa, who learned a month ago that his wife, Majorie Lee Donnelly, had presented him with a baby boy, Robert L. Donnelly. On their first anniversary, April 4, when the baby was a month old, The Post published a picture of mother and child, and Mrs. Donnelly mailed a copy to her fighting husband in answer to his plea that he'd "love to see" his heir.

The Post would like to offer the same services to other Washington men in the armed forces. Reproductions of the stories and photographs of pairs of Victory Families, to be chosen weekly, will be sent to fathers overseas so that they may have a picture of the newest additions to their families.

Selection of the first pair of Washington Victory Babies, chosen on the basis of letters (describing father and baby) received by The Post, will begin today for publication in The Sunday Post.

Two Victory Babies will be chosen each week thereafter, and entries must be received by noon on Wednesday in order to be considered for publication the following Sunday. Expenses will be assumed by The Post.

Communications should be directed to: The Victory Baby Editor, The Washington Post, City Room, Washington, D. C.

Art to Depict Dutch Resistance At Exhibit Here

Underground Holland and her heroic resistance against the Nazi invaders three years ago will be depicted to the people of Washington in an exhibit of photographs, posters and paintings at the United War Relief Center, 1218 Connecticut Avenue Northwest, opening this afternoon at 4 and remaining open all through the month of May.

Ambassador and Mme. A. Loudon will be present at the opening reception of the exhibition, sponsored by the Queen Wilhelmina Fund, and will greet United Nations officials.

Notable in the exhibit are two sets of panels by the Dutch artist, Joep Nicholaas, depicting the peaceful Low Country before the war and the terror that struck her after the invasion.

Budapest String Quartet Gives Animated Concert Program

By Ray C. B. Brown

Gertrude Clarke Whittall Foundation in the Library of Congress presents the Budapest String Quartet (Josef Roismann, Alexander Schneider, Boris Kroyt and Mischa Schneider) on Thursday night in Coolidge Auditorium. Program: Quartet in B flat major, Op. 76, No. (Haydn), Quartet No. 11 (Milhaud), Two Sketches on Idish themes (Griffes), Quartet in C sharp minor, Op. 131 (Beethoven).

As usual when the Budapest String Quartet plays on Capitol Hill, Coolidge Auditorium in the Library of Congress held its full quota of listeners last evening. Josef Roismann and his colleagues were in their wonted vein of consentient performance and technical proficiency, and offered a half-classical, half-modern program which will be enjoyed again tonight when it will be repeated for another audience. One makes that forecast of enjoyment with certainty, for the foursome has a captivating zest in interpretations.

BROWN

Of the two modern works on the program, one was very modern indeed, being the eleventh quartet by Darius Milhaud who composed it last year and dedicated it to the Budapest group. Two years separate No. 10 from No. 11, but there is little appreciable difference in style. The new one has the same indefinite way among tonalities, keeping the auditor on tenterhooks about the key signature, although the first movement ends surprisingly with a recognizable cadence.

That first movement is prankish and full of tricks, such as curious interrogative phrases that remain unanswered and a singular duo in harmonics for the violins interrupted by a growl from the violoncello. The second movement, a muted scherzo, is the best of the four, animated with real poesy and sensitive feeling. Milhaud's wit, always sharp and telling, enlivens the entire quartet, which is pithy and epigrammatic, concise in statements and abounding in unexpected quirks.

The other contemporary work was the posthumously published sketches by Charles Griffes, who was presumably planning a string quartet on Amerind themes. That it was never completed is another reason for lamenting his untimely death. These two sketches, the one grave and elegiac and the other effervescent with gayety, show that he estimated the selected themes at their true value. The aboriginal character of the melodies is perfectly preserved and they are not in the least sentimentalized or subjected to any distortion. The music has an authentic primitive sound, thanks to the starkness of the harmonic treatment.

The classics were Haydn's B flat major quartet from Opus 76 and Beethoven's C sharp minor quartet, Op. 131. Perhaps it is wrong to call the Beethoven quartet a classic, except in a chronological sense, for it is still a hard work to understand and would be noteworthy if it had been written last week. Some commentators find profound symbolism in the number of its movements: seven, which is the perfect number in mystic lore; and others discover secret meaning in the rotation of the key scheme in a circle. Whether or not one regards the quartet as a symbolic enigma, it is indisputably music of the spiritual plane.

The United States Navy School of Music Concert Band and Chorus presents its spring concert in Constitution Hall on Thursday evening, May 6. Program: Pictures at an Exhibition (Moussorgski); Landsighting (Gries); Six Victory Fanfares (Borovski, Copeland, Fulcihen, Milhaud, Piston, Wagenaar); Rhapsody for Alto Saxophone (Debussy); Will You Remember from "Maytime" (Romberg); Beats the Beguine from "Jubilee" (Porter); Salome's Dance from "Salome" (R. Strauss); On the Sea (Buck); We saw the Sea (Berlin); Take Me Down to the Sea (Bilder); Overture to "The Bat" (J. Strauss).

Hundreds of persons who had come to hear the spring concert of the United States Navy School of Music were turned away from Constitution Hall last night.

Filling the stage to capacity were members of the United States Navy School of Music band and chorus who after completing the school's prescribed course in band and vocal music are returned to the fleet as leaders of 20-piece bands.

Ensign James Thurmond, conductor of the concert band and chorus, in leading the lively program, demonstrated a firm beat and sure knowledge of his scores. Much of his inspiration must come from his musicians who perform with unbounded enthusiasm. Their playing never lacks for drama and fire. Their drumming is masterful. Moussorgski's "Pictures at an Exhibition" was performed by them with the verve and finesse associated with great concert orchestras. As an encore following the audience's thunderous reception of that selection, the band and chorus joined in Sousa's stirring march, "The Stars and Stripes Forever." Lights were lowered about the hall and for a thrilling episode focused on an American flag flying from the rafters while the chorus of excellently trained vocies sang.

The six individualistic and powerful fanfares were chosen from among those commissioned by Eugene Goosens, conductor of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra.

Excellent descriptive notes accompanied the program. The concert was open to the public and also broadcast over station WINX.

7 Navy Casualties

The Navy yesterday announced seven casualties, all listed as missing. In addition, five men previously listed as missing now are reported dead. None are from the Washington area.

This brings to 24,921 the total of Navy, Marine Corps and Coast Guard casualties reported to next of kin since December 7, 1941.

Two Convicted In Md. War Plant Fraud

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, May 6.—Convictions were returned today by a Federal jury against two of the 20 persons indicted in what the Government charged was a $1,400,000 fraud in connection with munitions contracts held by Triumph Explosives, Inc., of Elkton, Md.

They were Gustav H. Kann of Pittsburgh, former Triumph president, and Joseph Ben Decker of Elkton, one-time vice president, who were convicted on all five counts of an indictment accusing them of using the mails to defraud Triumph of more than $84,000.

The jury deliberated about an hour after receiving the case following a two-hour charge by Federal Judge W. Calvin Chesnut. Judge Chesnut deferred sentence pending rulings on motions for a new trial, and both Kann and Decker remained free on bail.

Court officials said the maximum penalty under the convictions was $1000 fine or five years' imprisonment, or both, on each count.

The former executives of the Elkton munitions concern, which was taken over by the Navy Department last October under presidential order, and later released, failed to take the witness stand during the trial, which began Monday.

However, Government witnesses related that the two one-time officials of Triumph obtained more than $84,000 by making checks payable to a secretary, who told the court she cashed them and turned them over to Decker and Kahn.

Judge Chesnu told the jurors that the principal question in the case was whether any of five checks drawn on a Pittsburgh bank were actually placed in the mails in Maryland in connection with the sum drawn from company funds as commissions on foreign munitions business.

A series of 15 indictments have been returned in the case, naming in addition to Kahn and Decker other former administrative employes of the Triumph company, several inspectors and others.

Kahn and Decker were the first to be tried.

CONSTIPATED? EASY DOES IT!

If you're constipated, chances are it may be due simply to a lack of "bulk"-forming foods in the diet.

If that's your trouble, why resort to purges? They usually work by working on you—by jolting your intestines into action or drawing water into them from other parts of the body.

Give yourself gentle, yet effective, relief — by eating KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN regularly. It's a delicious breakfast cereal that helps form a soft mass in the intestines, getting at the cause of constipation due to lack of "bulk" and correcting it. Eat ALL-BRAN regularly, drink plenty of water and "Join the Regulars"! Made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek.

D. C. Classes Are Planned To Teach Art of Canning

Victory canning schools, later to be converted into canning centers, will be established in public schools throughout the city this month, The Post learned yesterday.

Dovetailing into the victory garden program, the canning schools will provide instruction in approved home canning methods, beginning May 15, and will generally be centered in public schools equipped with a home economics laboratory or school cafeteria. When produce becomes available during the summer months the schools may become canning centers for homemakers who lack adequate equipment.

Quick Action Planned

Planned in response to the request of hundreds of women, classes will be organized as quickly as possible. Before the close of school next month a home canning program will also be available to home economics students in conjunction with their regular instruction. In some schools special sessions will be arranged for boys and girls not contracted in the home economics courses.

Potential teachers of the course yesterday underwent the first of two refresher sessions in a Victory Canning Institute at the Washington Gas Light Co. Intensive training to assure a uniform program with a common terminology throughout the various schools is being given by Ruth Sheldon, home economist for the gas company, under auspices of the District Nutritional and Conservation Committee of War Services. Mrs. Wayne Darrow of the AWVS will be chairman of production.

Four Two-Hour Sessions

Groups of 10 to 15 women in a community may organize their own group or register for assignment to a community group, and classes will be arranged to cover four sessions of two hours each. Registration blanks may be obtained from the department of home economics of the public schools, of which Mrs. Ola Day Rush is head.

Mrs. Rush commented yesterday that a large registration was anticipated since "The only incentive people need is a trip to the grocery store. These intensive courses will help homemakers save ration points and increase the food supply as they learn the proper and accepted methods of victory canning."

One of the few drawbacks to the program currently is the inavailability of pressure cookers, only recommended method for all meat and all vegetables except tomatoes.

In past years one of the great joys for Mother on Her Day has been to hear the voices of absent sons and daughters calling her over the Long Distance telephone.

But now we are at war, and the war is on the wires. War calls are now crowding Long Distance lines in ever-mounting numbers, and to clear the way for them, only such calls should now be made as are absolutely necessary.

We know Mother will understand.

District Delegate

Representative Walter is unquestionably right in linking his bill to give the District a delegate in Congress with the atrocious conditions under which many warworkers live in the Nation's Capital. Foul slums have been permitted to exist here largely because the District has had no spokesman to demand a cleanup. Congress has not been adequately and authoritatively informed as to the dangers to health which have accumulated in this teeming nerve center of the Nation. Certainly one of the first steps toward a remedy is to give this disfranchised city a representative—even a voteless one—who can work with Congress in lifting the pall of disgraceful living conditions that now hangs over it.

Mr. Walter's bill must thus be regarded as an emergency measure. It is not designed to right all the wrongs that were inflicted on residents of the District when Congress deprived them of their right to vote in 1874. It would not cure the confusion and weakness of the local government. Nevertheless its enactment would constitute a valuable start toward the attainment of more responsible government in the District.

Like the delegates from Alaska and Hawaii, the proposed District delegate would doubtless serve on all the committees handling legisiation of special interest to his constituents. For the first time in 69 years he could inform these committees in at least general terms as to what local residents want—what taxes they would rather pay, how their money should be spent and what legislation they favor. That service alone would help to jar the community from its lethargy born of long disfranchisement. And it would be of infinite value to Congress in its role of city council for the District.

It is particularly gratifying to note that this bill has been introduced by a high-ranking member of the House Judiciary Committee. We hope that the committee will conduct hearings on it in the near future and send it to the House as an emergency measure.

Bishop Leonard

The son of a clergyman and reared in a religious atmosphere. Bishop Adna Wright Leonard devoted the whole of his mature life to the service of his church and to the spiritual welfare of his fellow men. He was engaged in just such work when death struck him suddenly in the tragic crash of the airplane in Iceland which also cost the life of General Andrews.

Much of Bishop Leonard's service was expended in the sphere of education. In earlier years he was president of the Methodist Boys' College in Rome. More recently he served as president of the general board of education of the Methodist Church. As chairman of the board of trustees of the American University he had contributed greatly to the growth of that local institution. Although he came to Washington only in 1940 when he was appointed Resident Bishop of the Washington area, the vigor of his personality was already stamped upon the life of this community.

As chairman of the Methodist Commission on Chaplains and of the Commission on Army and Navy Chaplains, he embarked on a tour of American military establishments overseas at the specific suggestion of President Roosevelt. In a very real sense he was a representative of all American Protestantism, as well as of the church in which he was ordained. Few prelates contributed so much toward the spiritual guidance of men in the armed services. Like some of those to whom he ministered, Bishop Leonard died in the line of duty.

Beyond Tunisia

A certain sign that the Axis has given up Tunisia for lost even though the struggle for Bizerte and Tunis has only just begun, is seen in the growing concern in Berlin and Rome over the next Allied move in the Mediterranean. Thus Capt. Ludwig Sertorius, Nazi military commentator, speaking over the German radio Monday night, expressed the belief that a large-scale Allied landing operation on the Sicilian or Sardinian coast is imminent. It may, he thinks, occur even before the Tunisian campaign comes to an end. Substance is given such conclusions by the rumors, circulated by Vichy, that a large massing of Allied naval power is taking place at Gibraltar and in Algerian waters.

Such statements and rumors may be part of an Axis fishing expedition, the purpose being to trap the Allies into admissions that would reveal their actual plans. But they also reflect the growing jitters in Axis countries. Certainly once Tunisia is entirely in the hands of the Allied powers Sicily, Sardinia and the smaller Axis-held islands in the central Mediterranean, such as Pantelleria, would be even more vulnerable to Allied air power than they already are. Furthermore, it is clear that any land invasion of Europe from the allegedly soft underside would be fraught with excessive risk unless and until the Axis-held bastions in the Mediterranean—not only Sicily and Sardinia but also Crete—were occupied by our side. This does not mean that any invasion of those islands is close at hand. But the alarm over that very possibility shows that the Tunisian venture is proving not only an asset to the United Nations militarily but also a useful factor in the perennial war of nerves.

Connally Bill

Two powerful influences played upon the Senate when it debated and then passed the Connally antistrike bill. From the beginning it was evident that the Senate was under pressure. Its members, or at least a large majority of them, felt that it was necessary to act promptly to meet the menace of a second walkout from the mines. Yet the Senate dislikes action under pressure. It would much have preferred to thresh out the basic issues of this bill in committee and to debate it at leisure on the floor. This inclination was overcome only because the Senate realized that it has been remiss in failing to pass legislation to facilitate the settlement of labor disputes during the long months when no crisis was at hand.

If the Senate had taken up the issue when there was ample time for hearings and debate it might have turned out a much better bill than that which it sent to the House on Wednesday. Indeed, sound legislation when the need for it first became evident might have averted the coal crisis. At best the measure now rushed to passage is a hastily devised remedy that may prove to be defective in some particulars. We cannot avoid the conclusion that the first moral to be drawn from the present situation is that Congress should act when the need for legislation becomes obvious instead of waiting for a crisis. In this instance Congress would probably have done so if the President had not requested inaction, but executive short-sightedness does not excuse a lack of courage or initiative on Capitol Hill.

As for the Connally bill itself, we believe that it is generally constructive. It would give the President clear-cut authority to take over any plant or mine essential to the war effort when production is halted by a strike or other labor disturbance. It makes definite provision for return of such property to its owners when the emergency has passed. Employes of such plants could submit their case to the War Labor Board and if dissatisfied with the decision they could still walk out without penalty. But anyone coercing, inducing or aiding persons to strike in plants in the hands of the Government would be guilty of a crime. In other words, John L. Lewis could not aid or support with union funds a resumption of the coal strike, if this bill becomes law, without the risk of being clapped into jail. That is a drastic measure, but it is not too drastic when the Government must deal with ruthless little dictators who are willing to cripple the war effort to enforce their own demands.

The bill also gives the WLB a background of statutory authority which it now lacks. Arbitration of unsettled disputes would become compulsory in effect. While such decisions by the WLB would have to be made within the terms of the law and outstanding executive orders, the board would nevertheless retain some discretion. Powers of subpena to compel the attendance of witnesses would also be granted. The granting of such definite legal authority to the WLB is long overdue. A Nation engaged in total war cannot safely rely for a continued flow of war materials upon an agreement with labor leaders which some of those leaders will not respect. Perhaps the House can further clarify some of the vague provisions of the bill. But its enactment should not be delayed.

Stalin On Poland

The statement on Polish-Russian relations made by Joseph Stalin in a letter to the Moscow correspondent of the New York Times, plus the attitude toward Soviet Russia expressed by General Sikorski, the Polish Premier, in an address on Polish National Day, should help heal the dangerous breach that recently developed between these two Allies. Stalin has again put himself on record—he did it earlier in conversations with Premier Sikorski—as favoring the establishment of a strong, independent Poland after the war. At the same time he suggests that if the Polish people so desire, Soviet Russia will be prepared to join with Poland in a mutual assistance pact against Germany. Premier Sikorski, for his part, has stated that "the securing of friendly relations with Soviet Russia has been and continues to be one of the main guiding principles of the whole Polish government and the whole Polish nation."

Unfortunately these statements do not mean that Russia and Poland see eye to eye on certain basic issues. The boundary question is one, the "release" of Poles in Russia another. But such matters had better be left for postwar settlement rather than be raised at this time when arguments over them can only lead to a split in the ranks of the United Nations. Unity alone can bring about a speedy and successful termination of the war. This does not mean that the allies of Poland and Russia should not do all in their power to bring the two governments together now. That is why the special mission to Moscow of Joseph E. Davies, former American Ambassador to Russia, is both timely and distinctly in order, though it can only be preparatory and preliminary to a direct meeting of Stalin, Churchill and Roosevelt of the kind which the British and American leaders were anxious to have at Casablanca but which, because of Stalin's refusal, has not yet come about.

R Street Blues

The affair of "the big red house on R Street" is at once diverting and disconcerting. But the effort to magnify it into something like the proportions of a national scandal or a major political crisis has thus far fallen rather flat. It does not appear that the hospitable Mr. Monroe (nee Kaplan) actually obtained any war contracts for his clients as the result of his social intimacy with the great ones. Indeed, it is hard to see how under the present system of awarding contracts he could possibly have done so. Thus it would seem that his principal victims were not so much the eminent politicos and illustrious warriors who graciously agreed to eat Mr. Monroe's food and to drink his no doubt excellent liquor, but the clients and prospective clients who were impressed by this game of hob and nob with the headline folk.

At the same time the episode offers an illuminating commentary on Washington mores. The methods employed by Mr. Monroe and his lady associate are, after all, those which have been perfected by any number of ambitious Washington hostesses. Senator X is baited with the opportunity of meeting Secretary Y and vice versa. Mr. Alpha, the influential columnist, is offered the opportunity of a chat with General Beta just back from somewhere or other. Meanwhile the general is assured that his dinner partner will be the fascinating Mrs. Gamma. And in the hope of adding Mr. Alpha to her own string of celebrities, Mrs. Gamma, of course, accepts. Coordinator and Mrs. Delta are asked to meet the brilliant young author of Education for Greatness, which everybody is talking about, and if the coordinator is a bit cold to the prospect, Mrs. Delta is apt to be quite enthusiastic.

Because almost everybody in Washington is really a stranger, and social life must be more or less improvised, an impressive salon can be assembled very quickly by any hardworking hostess who can afford one. Moreover, in a city where every third person is an outstanding authority on something or other, many of us are too awed by our own labels not to be impressed by the labels of others. Finally, after a hard day's work at running a global war, or of reconstructing a universe, or both, the prospect of a little diversion is not always unpleasant.

Thus when our secretary tells us that Mrs. Whosis, whom we can only vaguely remember, has called to ask whether we will dine next week to meet the famous Professor McJigger, whom we cannot remember at all, we merely instruct her to make sure whether it is black or white tie. It would seem, then, that Mr. Monroe has merely put this fascinating Washington custom on a professional basis. Build-up is, of course, a familiar and approved modern business negotiation, and it must be an open secret by now that many of these hardheaded businessmen are just as naif in such matters as the rest of us.

However, the whole business is not exactly a healthy symptom. It is indicative of how largely both pretense and credulity have become characteristic of contemporary American life. But the cure for the salon craze, amateur or professional, at least, is within sight. The food scarcity will presently take care of it.

At Blair House

President Enrique Penaranda de Castillo of Bolivia, who is in Washington on an official visit, is a statesman who has grasped the all-important idea that the welfare of every American nation is bound up inextricably with the well being of all. His task as Chief Executive of Bolivia, a post he assumed through constitutional means after an orderly election, has been extremely difficult. He had the aftermath of the ruinous Chaco war to contend with, and the period of military dictatorship that followed it. More recently he has been faced by the problem of Axis activity in his country. Bolivia is by no means out of the woods economically. The process of recovery from the war, the task of developing the country's resources, will take years. But the effects of General Penaranda's vigorous and statesmanlike efforts are being felt. In the international sphere he has been at all times—as Bolivia's role at the Rio conference and more recently her action in declaring war on the Axis testifies—an ardent advocate of hemisphere solidarity. Washington welcomes President Penaranda as a great leader of his people and a tried and true friend of the United States.

FLIGHT

The sharp wings darted.
I watched for the flying wedge
To break through—
But no bird started.

I searched along the changing edge
Where, sky-pierced now, the cloud had broken.
I saw no bird, no blade of wing,
No song was spoken.

I stood, my eyes turned upward still,
And drank the air and breathed the light
Then, like a leaf upon the wind,
I climbed the sky. I made the flight.

Congress And Labor

By Mark Sullivan

Connally Bill

EACH new development in the coal crisis is a chicken come home to roost—by this time there is a flock of them. Most of them were incubated by one condition—the President's wish that Congress should not legislate about labor, that labor matters be left in his hands and the hands of boards and individuals appointed by him.

One of the chickens, a useful one now, is the Connally bill about strikes during wartime. That bill was put forward in December, 1941. It was put forward because of the same condition that now inspires the bill again—a previous coal strike then being conducted by Mr. John L. Lewis.

At that time, members of the Administration went to Senate leaders and asked them to suspend action on the Connally bill and several other measures having to do with labor. The request was based on a plea that the President had a plan of his own for handling labor relations during the war. On that plea, action on the Connally bill, and all other pending bills, was suspended.

SENATOR Connally's bill was brought forward again in April, 1942. On this occasion, request for suspension of the bill was made by President Roosevelt personally to Senator Connally.

Reluctantly, Senator Connally consented. Explaining his attitude to the Senate, Mr. Connally stated that he continued to believe in his bill, and was refraining only because of the President's request.

Today, in the third emergence of the Connally bill, presumably the President will welcome it. For today the bill provides the President with a way out of an awkward situation which has arisen out of the attempt of himself and the War Labor Board he set up, to handle labor matters in their own way.

There is another chicken. The coal strike which Mr. Lewis conducted in the fall of 1941 was for a closed shop. It lasted intermittently from September, 1941, until late December. The technique of that strike was much like the technique of the present one. Throughout, Mr. Lewis struck, suspended the strike, set deadlines, and renewed the strike. Throughout, President Roosevelt insisted, specifically and with apparent firmness, that the Administration would not grant the closed shop. But in the end, Mr. Lewis got the closed shop.

Today, the employer of the miners' union is the Government. Presumably the Government will be expected to recognize the closed shop. Presumably the Government will be expected to do what private employers must do under the closed shop as practiced by Mr. Lewis' union—deduct union dues from the miners' pay and hand the dues over to Mr. Lewis and the other officers of the miners' union.

THERE is another chicken. Early during the war members of Congress undertook to change the wage-hour law, which dictates a five-day, 40-hour week with time and a half for overtime. That law was enacted for peacetime, when jobs were scarce. It is obviously not adapted to wartime. But when members of Congress undertook to change it, the Administration opposed, as it has opposed all action by Congress having to do with labor.

Today, when the Administration tells the miners to work six days a week, it must pay time and a half for the extra day. By that, the cost of coal is increased, the expenditure of money by the Government is increased, and the effect of that is another upward step in cost of living, another step in the direction of inflation.

Throughout all this runs a breach of fundamental principle. The principle is that policy about labor should be laid down by Congress, by the legislative branch of Government.

Labor Unions

For a decade labor has had free rein, and slowly but surely there developed within the unions the very evil they were organized to fight, the vesting of power in one man or group of men.

Persons who hold up production in vital industries in wartime are guilty of treason! Regardless of his political views, it is the sworn duty of the President to use all of the armed forces of the United States, if necessary, to prevent such occurrences and preserve the Union. DANL. MUSGRAVE.

A Balance Sheet

By Paul Schubert

Our Global Strategy

AS WE start a new fighting season in western Europe, the time seems ripe to draw up a balance sheet on the North African campaign, now six months old.

The North African campaign is very definitely a part of the warfare of western Europe. Leaving aside futile argument as to whether the British-American invasion of northwest Africa last November did or did not constitute the opening of a "second front," it most certainly did cause a complete regrouping of the Axis military forces in the European theater. By setting up a great base of United Nations strength in Algeria, it exposed the Axis to pressure from a new quarter without lessening the pressure from any other direction. By forcing the Axis to fight a difficult and expensive—and losing—overseas campaign in Tunisia, it began action which may not have warranted the term "second front," but, for all that, has been an obvious stepping stone to the "second front" of 1943.

Why a "second front" in western Europe?

We've come to accept "European second front" strategy as the approved United Nations plan. Knock Germany (plus stooge Italy) out of the war—then turn to the Far East, and gang up on Japan. . . .

WHAT'S the logic behind this strategy? Is it a plan designed to relieve Russia of dangerous pressure—to keep Russia "in the war" as the best way of hurting Germany? Russia has been one of the loudest clamorers for a European "second front." Is it right to say that "second front" strategy has a "Made in Moscow" label?

Or is the plan one designed to relieve pressure on the British Isles? Perhaps tough Russia has always been able to look after herself, provided the flow of weapons keeps coming. Perhaps the really critical danger of 1943 was the long-shot chance of a desperate German invasion of the British Isles—and the best way to forestall that was to keep Germany's armies busy somewhere on the continent.

Or could it be that the main reason for "second front" strategy was, from the beginning, the relief of pressure on Egypt, the Suez Canal and the Middle East—the Axis threat which last year seemed so great that some observers felt there was real danger of a joint German-Japanese break-through.

The weakness in all of the above arguments, as logical background for the "second front" idea, is that all are defensive—hangovers of the kind of thinking we of the United Nations were forced to use up to and through the middle of 1942, as long as we were cast in the role of military underdogs.

But the strategy which we inaugurated with the opening of the North African campaign last November is offensive—not defensive—strategy. It is notable that within a month of the opening of this campaign, Russia, too, felt able to go over to the offensive—to use up military strength in immediate, positive action, rather than to conserve that strength for future defense against Axis blows to come. And our "second front" strategy of 1943 is offensive.

In other words, our plan is not to "relieve" pressure on any of the United Nations, but to put pressure on Germany—to defeat this principal European enemy, as No. 1 objective in our global war.

Why Germany first, rather than Japan?

In fighting Germany and Japan, we are faced with two different kinds of war making. The war against Germany is typical European-type warfare of mass armies armed with factory-produced material—in this case three-dimensional power warfare.

The Tunisian campaign has served as a preview of this struggle.

BUT the most notable element of the Tunisian campaign has not been the clash of arms between British-American invaders and Axis troops. The outstanding fact is the statistical curiosity that the United Nations armies in North Africa now number far more troops than those landed by Britain and America. By arming the French, we have found our armies multiplying at a great rate. And when the actual campaign is over, it will be the French who take over most of the police and garrison duties, freeing our expeditionary forces for immediate duty elsewhere.

This same phenomenon is going to be repeated on a much larger scale up in Europe, as our invading armies liberate captive manpower. Not only will a European "second front" start a snowball-landside of anti-Axis military power into motion but a liberated Europe will share the post-combat police and manpower job. A European campaign moves toward a logical and visible climax of reestablished selfgovernment.

Not so the warfare of the Far East—a different kind of warfare, colonial warfare—in which the winning of battles merely begins the problems of administration and policing. This is one important reason why Europe comes first—the other job will be with us longer.

Car Stop

The Public Utilities Commission's Order No. 3291-1 amazes employes of the Department of Agriculture, especially those working in the Administration Building. This order arbitrarily discontinues the streetcar stop at Fourteenth Street and Jefferson Drive for an indefinite period and forces the employes to waste valuable time in going into the tunnel and walking back to the Administration Building.

If it was done in the name of safety and traffic speed-up we are unable to understand why there can be three stops between E Street and Constitution Avenue, at much more dangerous intersections, and none between Constitution Avenue and D Street (the tunnel), a much longer distance.

MURRAY MOORE.

Washington, May 3.

Blackout

What a farce this blackout business—why so many signals? Last night it was at least five minutes before the street lights went out along Columbia Road at Eighteenth—and the automobiles went back and forth along with the streetcars, as if there had been no warning. People stood on the streets and talked. If we really had an air raid, one of those long blasts should be enough to tell people to get under cover and stay until an all-clear signal sounded. Why this absurd notion of having one's radio announce the "all clear"? Everybody isn't right next to a radio, and if we were having a real raid and walls were falling all about us—where would the radio be?

One of those long blasts should certainly be warning enough—with two or three short blasts for an all-clear. ALICE P. BETTIS.

Washington, May 4.

Air Raids

The confusion and dissatisfaction expressed with regard to the local air-raid warnings is my reason for respectfully submitting the following for consideration by the responsible authority.

1. That information by reference to colors should be reserved for the personnel of the A. R. P.; not for the general public.

2. That the public shall rely on the sirens for the "alert" and the "all clear," which not only eliminate the possibility of confusion but they give definite information as to what people are to do for their own safety. Efficient A. R. P. communications should allow ample time for people to seek shelter after the "alert" is given. The radio may be used for the benefit of outlying and sparsely populated areas which have no local organization.

Trade Agreements

The policy followed by the State Department since the enactment of the reciprocal trade agreements program has proven to be wise, and achieved wonderful results in bringing this country closer to other nations, and in increasing our international trade.

Trade, hitherto impossible with many parts of the world, due to prohibitive restrictions, was opened up, and industry was able to expand and acquire new sources of raw materials, so vital to the manufacture of first-class products for export to all parts of the world.

To discredit this policy by criticisms of the kind which are being expressed from time to time, seems to evade the real issue. The statement to the effect that Germany was driven into this war because of this country's reciprocal trade treaties with her neighbors is a fallacy. Nothing is farther from the truth. Economic relations with Germany for years have shown that this country always has shown a leniency and understanding of her problems.

Germany violated all established treaties in any way she saw fit, and as long as it was to her advantage. Besides, the limitations intended to balance the trade in a more equitable manner between the various countries concerned, were circumvented and abused by her in many ways. The whole world knows today why Germany is fighting, to dominate not only her neighboring countries, but the entire world.

Our distinguished Secretary of State, Mr. Cordell Hull, should be congratulated on his efforts to establish closer and more friendly relations by concluding reciprocal trade treaties with various countries, and for the beneficial results which were achieved for our industry and commerce. His policy in this respect deserves high praise and full support of trade circles and all our citizens whose concern is the welfare of this country.

The Once Over

Search For A Chicken

Q. Is this a butcher shop?

A. I'm sorry to say that it is.

Q. Have you any chickens?

A. If I had chickens I would put them in the window and insist they were peacocks.

Q. What's the matter? I thought chickens were not even rationed, they were so plentiful.

A. Listen, I'm a butcher, not a mystery detective.

Q. But there must be chickens around somewhere.

A. That what's I thought.

Q. Where do you get your poultry?

A. Just now I get them in the movies. That old Pathe weekly rooster sure looks good these days.

Q. But I read in the papers that there was a plentiful poultry supply in this country and that Washington would rather have me eat chicken than meat.

A. Mister, if you're going to eat any chicken just now you're going to have to eat it on the fly.

Q. A friend of mine got a chicken here yesterday.

A. Thanks! Now I know who blew my safe.

Q. Seriously, what's the truth about the chicken situation?

A. I wish I knew. It must be a secret between the chickens and the OPA. Do you know what my wholesaler said this morning when I called up and ordered chickens? He said if I could send him an egg and some straw he would sit on it and see what happened.

Q. I even tried to order chicken in a restaurant last night and the waiter just laughed.

A. You were getting special service. Most waiters growl at that one.

Q. I couldn't even get a chicken pie.

A. Veal must be hard to get, too!

Q. Do you think I would have any luck if I tried some chicken farm?

A. Only if you were interested in hard cider.

Q. But all these places have plenty of chickens.

A. If you press the point they will argue that they are golden pheasants bred exclusively for the Maharaja of Indore.

Q. I see wagonloads of poultry on the road every day. Where is it going?

A. It's a new OPA order. Every chicken raiser has to give the chickens a ride every day, rain or shine.

Q. I never remember a time in this country before when I couldn't get chicken, did you?

A. Only when I expected it in a chain restaurant chicken sandwich.

Q. Can't you get me a small roaster by hook or crook?

A. The hook won't make any difference but the crook is a merchandising essential.

By his attitude on coal strikes you would think Mr. Lewis was determined to freeze his country for the duration.

And it is Elmer Twitchell who says that the coal union boss would have fiddled while Rome froze.

Just a little humble cottage—
Just a modest little shack
That's where I'll be waiting for you
Soldier boy, when you come back.

Just a cabin in the clearing
(With some fifty rooms or so)
Just a hut (Siena marble)
But it's home, sweet home, you know.

Just a camp for weary girlies
With a marble banquet hall
Half-a-block wide, but no matter—
It's a shelter, after all.

* * * *

Elmer Twitchell says he heard that John L. Lewis had been asked to contribute some ice to the bloodbank.

Would you say a strike in the coal fields would "scuttle" the war effort?

John L. Lewis

If the opinion of a buck private is worth anything, I'd like to offer a few remarks on the recent strike in our Nation's coal mines, which constitutes, in my opinion, the severest blow to national morale we have seen since the beginning of the war.

We Army men are happy to know that the 500,000-odd men involved are not representative of America's populace, but we are disturbed by the fact that they practically hold the key to America's production of steel.

PVT. JOHN C. GUSTAFSON.

Fort Sheridan, Ill., May 1.

Whether Lewis is right or wrong whether the board he tried to deal with are a bunch of deadheads or not—no matter what the score is, there is no room in the U. S. A. for a strike of any vital industry at any time during our national emergency. It is an act of treason and should be treated as such. A SOLDIER.

Wendover Field, Utah, May 2.

This is not a battle against labor. Instead it is the battle of labor and the other elements of our populace against the dirtiest deeds and principles a man can enact. Lewis has sold his country down the river.

Severe Loss

By Ernest Lindley

Andrews Specially Trained

LINDLEY

THE DEATH of General Andrews was a severe loss, not only because of his ability, but because he had been specially trained for the command which he held. He was best known to the public as a stout prophet of aviation, one of General Mitchell's close friends and disciples. As head of the General Headquarters Air Force he fought hard for four-engined bombers and a separate air force. The upshot was that in 1939 he was sidetracked and demoted.

But when General Marshall became chief of staff in 1940, he brought Andrews back to Washington and put him on the general staff—in charge of training and field operations. This brought Andrews up to date on the other branches of the service. Then he was shifted to the Panama Canal Department and in the fall of 1941 his command was broadened to cover the Caribbean area. This was a critical zone requiring elaborate coordination of aircraft and ground defenses.

In October, 1942, when the invasion of French North Africa impended, Andrews was pulled out of the Caribbean and sent to the Middle East as commander of the United States forces. This gave him a chance to get acquainted with the British, to see the best British army in action, and to work at first hand with air forces of all types in an active theater. The purpose was to prepare him for the command of the European theater, to which he was assigned the following February.

WHEN the North African occupation was determined upon, it was planned that eventually it would be set up as a command separate from the European theater, based on the United Kingdom. But during the early critical months of the occupation, it was deemed wise to leave the two theaters combined so that General Eisenhower could call at will on any or all American facilities and men available in the United Kingdom. If the European theater had been separated at once, Eisenhower would have had to solicit aid; and experience has shown that a solicitation, even by a general in the most critical theater at the moment, is quite a different thing from an order.

After the critical period had passed, however, and Eisenhower seemed reasonably sure of being able to get what he wanted directly from the United States, the European theater was separated from the American theater and placed under Andrews. Probably no other American theater commander had been given more rounded training for his job. In the case of most of the others, there simply had not been enough time and opportunities to provide the finishing course which Andrews had.

However, the opportunities to train generals for higher commands, as well as officers at all other levels, are rapidly expanding. The Tunisian campaign has tested and seasoned officers as well as men. Probably some flopped. But when the campaign is over, many of tested worth will be brought back to this country, and assigned to new outfits. In fact, some were brought back shorty after the landings of November. They had not had much experience, but it was more than most officers in this country had had, and it was thought desirable to begin transfusing experience as soon as possible. Also, some officers, including General Fredendall, who fought in Tunisia, have been brought back and given new commands. At the time, it was widely rumored that they had failed to measure up, or had made mistakes. But in many instances these rumors appear to have been incorrect.

RECENT dispatches from Tunisia have emphasized that the dispersion of American forces which made possible the reverse at Kasserine Pass, was due to necessity. That verdict is supported by informed sources in Washington.

Reports from the Tunisian front and by competent military observers sent from Washington indicate that the American forces become veterans in a hurry. This is said to be true of officers and men alike. It is probably attributable in large part to the high average intelligence of the men and officers in our Army, and partly to the quality of the training they have received.

The training of many of the new divisions which will be ready for action later this year will be even more thorough and severe than that of the divisions now fighting in Tunisia. The Army is also greatly pleased with the quality of the junior officers they are getting from the Officer Candidate Schools. The assignment to these units in training of battle-seasoned officers from Tunisia and other fronts, should tone them up still more. By the end of this year, the sort of special preparation and seasoning which it was possible to provide for General Andrews will cease to be the exception. It, or its equivalent, will be found at all levels in the Army.

Sweden Blockaded

By Marquis Childs

(Second of Series.)

Nazis Cut Off Nation

Stockholm, May 6.—For more than two months Germany's blockade of Sweden's west coast port of Gothenburg has been complete. Not since early February has a tanker brought oil for the Swedish fleet patrolling territorial waters. Except for occasional courier planes, Sweden is cut off from the democratic world.

So well has economy been organized to meet the war emergency that many believe the country could exist for a long period in the face of a continuing blockade. It would mean, of course, worsening of a living standard still far above the level of the rest of Europe.

Already cuts have begun. With the supply of leather from the Argentine stopped, it has become necessary to institute drastic shoe rationing. Overnight a ration of one pair of shoes for each adult every 18 months has been applied, and only one repair during the same period is permitted.

While possibly Sweden could tighten its national belt and exist with the door to the west closed tight, there is every desire here to reopen trade with the western world on however limited a scale. Swedes are thinking of their position not only in the war, but in the postwar world.

Negotiate for Quotas

That is why negotiations are to begin this week in London regarding quotas to be granted by British and Americans if and when the Germans relax their blockade.

The German ban was clamped on when the Swedish government ruled that two armed Norwegian ships could leave a Swedish port for London. These ships never left, but Nazi ire was roused, an an absolute blockade was declared. Twelve Swedish merchant ships scattered around the world are now waiting to return to Sweden.

Negotiations in London have an importance far beyond the immediate issue of theoretical quotas on oil, cotton, hides, etc., when the Nazi blockade is lifted. They may well determine what Sweden's role from now on is to be. Hugh Cumming of the State Department is coming from Washington for discussions. Cass Canfield of the Board of Economic Welfare is already in London. Accompanying a delegation from the Swedish Foreign Office will be Marcus Wallenberg, jr., of the family of financiers which has played so important a part in Sweden recent history.

The disposition on the part of the Allies is to bargain with the Swedes for reasonable quotas, even though these quotas might mean some indirect benefit for the Nazis. Such bargaining would entail some concessions from the Swedes. There are many reasons why the Allies desire to see Sweden remain neutral. Stockholm is almost the only window looking onto the dark continent that is Europe today. For both Americans and British, but particularly for the latter, it is an invaluable source of information.

On the eve of the London negotiations, it is well known here that a small minority in the Allied camp favor a ruthless policy based on the thesis that if some good accrues to Germany, then the whole trade should be stopped. On the other hand, a documented case has been made to show that imposition of an Allied blockade might work to the Germans' advantage. Swedes themselves are determined to go a long way to prevent isolation.

Their position, of course, is extremely difficult. They live on the Baltic Sea with two powerful neighbors, both of whom they deeply mistrust. The fear of Russia is an ancient heritage. The fear of Germany is based on the realization of what Nazi occupation actually meant to Norway.

Sweden Shocked

Human beings are reluctant to believe what is unpleasantly uncomfortable, which may explain why it took some time for the Swedes to be convinced that German occupation meant scientific brutality and oppression. This was true even though Sweden was in the very shadow of that oppression. An act that shocked workers and peasants was when the Nazis took blankets from the Norwegians.

The upper class had many German friends, including Goering, whose first wife was a Swede. The story is told of a Swedish count who met a Norwegian exile and began asking after old friends in Oslo. To his astonishment he learned that most of them were in jail. "Why, I will have to call up Goering and tell him about this!" he is said to have replied.

All but a few Nazi-minded Swedes have now learned that it is not a matter of a telephone call to Goering, just as businessmen in Germany finally learned that naziism was as destructive to individual enterprise and to individuals' rights as communism. Mistrusting both Russia and Germany, what Sweden really fears is a separate peace between her two powerful neighbors, and a renewal of the pact signed in August, 1939.

Separate Peace Feared

If the break between Poland and Russia caused a storm throughout the world, it produced a positive tidal wave here. The press and public are ready to believe that it presaged a Soviet break with the Allies and a separate pact with the Nazis. This is not so much from the conservative press as it is from Social-Democratic organs.

The Social Democraten here in Stockholm said:

"While surrendering hope of an absolute victory, the Third Reich now aims at a separate Russo-German peace, which is reflected in the German press and statements. The 1939 Russo-German pact of friendship goes to prove that the Soviet may be found willing to lend an ear to any reasonable discussion.

This would certainly mean that Germany must be prepared to relinquish all claims on the Ukraine and probably approve the Baltic republics becoming Russian, but Poland may be left for division as it was so often before."

Stalin's recent pledge to carry the war to final victory did something to dissipate this mistrust, but it did not entirely dispel it. A rough guess would be that 95 per cent of the Swedes fear Germany and 85 per cent fear Russia.

With her heritage of the past and the threat of the present, it is an extremely difficult task today to steer Sweden's foreign policy. It calls for all the skill and tact of men who are now shaping that policy.

The Gallup Poll

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

More Than One-Third of Warworkers Think Absenteeism is Inexcusable, Survey Finds

Princeton, N. J., May 6.—Many theories have been advanced as to the causes of absenteeism in war plants. Labor leaders have been inclined to assign illness, bad living conditions and transportation difficulties as principal causes, while others have claimed that a large part of the absenteeism is for inexcusable reasons.

Actually the problem is many-sided, reaching deep into human psychology with all of its unknowns. However, to canvass and record the ideas of warworkers themselves, the Institute had 118 field reporters located in five main war production areas throughout the Nation talk to workers in war factories about the problem.

Each reporter put this question to workers with whom he talked:

"How do you yourself account for absenteeism among workers?"

The results show that whereas about half of the workers felt that most of the absenteeism is caused by illness or fatiguing work and long hours, more than one-third minced no words in assigning a great part to unflattering causes.

Of those who felt that much of the absenteeism is inexcusable, the greatest number said it was due to "irresponsibility and laziness," that a great many of the absentees "just don't realize the seriousness of their jobs."

Another group almost equally as large said they thought that "too much money" was responsible for a lot of absenteeism. According to these workers, people are making so much money that they don't mind losing a day now and then. Others said in this connection that many workers were staying away from work to spend their money, to take care of personal affairs, or to work around their houses.

"Drinking . . . hangovers . . . too much weekending," were mentioned as responsible for much of the absenteeism by the next largest group, who felt a great part of the absenteeism was without good excuse.

Surprisingly small was the group which declared that transportation difficulties were responsible. The actual percentage was negligible—2 per cent. In many areas transportation has been cited as a major cause of absenteeism in war plants.

Among a miscellany of causes cited were "taking time off to go see families . . . taking time off to be with husbands or boy friends on furloughs . . . taking time off to hire someone to care for children."

Following is a table showing the causes mentioned by the workers in the order of frequency with which they were mentioned:

Illness	26%
Fatigue and strain from long hours of work	28
Irresponsibility, lack of interest in work, laziness	13
Too much pay	12
Drinking, hangovers, too much weekending	10
Transportation difficulties	2
Miscellaneous	6
Don't know or no opinion	12

The total percentages in the table come to more than 100 per cent because some of the workers cited more than one cause as important.

Waring Hits At Civilians

Smugness Charged

By the Associated Press

Indianapolis, May 6.—Our fighting men are winning their battles on the military front, but the home front is not yet winning its battles, Roane Waring, National Commander of the American Legion, told a public meeting here tonight in reporting on his recent north African tour.

"Make no mistake about this war," said the beetle-browned legion chief in his prepared address, which was broadcast over National (blue) network. "It is a fight to the death.

"American fighting men are dying on their feet in North Africa and in the Far Pacific, that we who stay at home may not have to live on our knees."

"So many of our people have the idea that the war is practically won," he said. "Nothing could be further from the truth. This false optimism tends to slow down production. . . .

"As he (the American soldier) faced the hated Nazi on the Tunisian battle line, America witnessed at home the sorriest spectacle that a nation at war ever faced, when John L. Lewis issued his infamous 'no tresspassing' order to 530,000 coal miners."

At one point Waring asked to "nail some German propaganda lies."

"In this war," he said, "there is not the slightest friction between the high commands or between the private soldiers of the American, British and French forces. The Allied Armies are working as a team:

"Neither are the British letting somebody else do their fighting for them. They are doing their own fighting and doing it magnificently. Those British soldiers in Africa are superb. They have been through hell, and its fires have not daunted them. You've got to admire them."

D. C. Police to Investigate Motorists Violating Gas Ban

Metropolitan police have been called upon by the District Office of Price Administration for assistance in detecting B and C card holders who are using gasoline given them for occupational mileage for nonessential driving, the OPA announced yesterday.

Reports also will be requested from OPA offices in other cities concerning appearances of District automobiles bearing B or C stickers, it was reported.

Police Chief Edward J. Kelly immediately issued a directive to all commanding officers urging "full cooperation" with the OPA in reducing nonessential use of gasoline by any but A card holders, who may drive wherever they please on their 1½-gallon allotment.

"Officers can best assist by checking the ration books of all motorists who are stopped for other violations," Chief Kelly said. It was thus made clear that there will be no "snooping" on the part of the police force to ferret out violators.

Meanwhile a number of filling-station operators reported that "it is costing us money to stay in business without any gasoline to sell," as the local petroleum famine continued unabated.

One owner of eight large stations told The Post that he now has on hand about three-fourths of a day's supply and that one of his establishments was forced to close yesterday until Monday, when it is due to have another delivery.

"I might just as well go out of business for all the gasoline I can sell," he said gloomily. "The companies just don't have it on hand and they can't deliver what they don't have."

Earlier this week the National OPA declared that the "hand-to-mouth" basis probably would continue indefinitely, and other sources said that relief might come in July when new pipelines begin operating and barge shipments increase.

The District office also emphasized that it was keeping a stringent check on unauthorized sales of gasoline by local stations and that it planned action on all reported cases of the use of loose coupons and of T coupons by private individuals.

Father J. E. Gedra Is Given Books By Forum Group

The Rev. Joseph E. Gedra, assistant director of the Critics' Forum—Catholic Thought on the Best Sellers—was presented with a set of historical books by the Critics' Forum Committee at the closing session of the Forum at the Mayflower Hotel on Wednesday evening in recognition of his part in making the Critics' Forum a success since it was inaugurated here in March 1940.

At this meeting the Rev. Dr. John Keating Cartwright, pastor of the Church of the Immaculate Conception and founder and director of the Critics' Forum movement, reviewed two of the Catholic best-sellers, "The Judgment of the Nations," by Christopher Dawson and "The Edge of the Abyss," by Alfred Noyes.

Miss Margaret G. Shannon, a member of the Critics' Forum Committee, in making the presentation to Father Gedra attributed the success the Critics' Forum has had through the years "to the untiring efforts of one person who had worked hard, but who has consistently remained in the background."

Father Gedra, who is the assistant pastor of the Church of the Immaculate Conception is also the secretary of the Committee for the Three Hours Observance of Good Friday in the Nation's Capital and Moderator of the American Lithuanian Society.

Del Vecchio has photographed every opening baseball game since then, and the two Redskins championship games. O.K.—more pictures, more bed. R-r-r-ing—anyhow, Del Vecchio got five calls to cover five fires before dawn that morning. After the fifth fire he gave up and wouldn't go back to bed. He was afraid it might be unlucky. Another midnight call sent him to Front Royal to cover a triple shooting. He worked all night and all the next day, got back to make the bulldog edition (9 P. Store Orders Up 27% Here During Month

By S. Oliver Goodman

Merchandise orders to meet the needs of Washington department stores sales were 27 per cent higher at the end of March than a year ago, the Federal Reserve Bank at Richmond reported yesterday.

Orders for goods averaged 24 per cent higher in the entire Fifth Reserve District, 41 per cent larger in Richmond, and 10 per cent up in Baltimore.

The bank's report adds that stocks of goods on hand in Washington stores on March 31 were 17 per cent less than on the same 1942 date. Stocks were down 12 per cent in the entire Fifth District. Baltimore stores' inventories were off 10 per cent, while Richmond showed a 1 per cent increase.

The same report shows that Washingtonians didn't pay their March bills as fast as persons did in other cities. During the month, 24 per cent of the bills due Washington stores at the beginning of March were paid. Payments in the entire Fifth District averaged 26 per cent, with Baltimore's record being 33 per cent.

As reported previously, local retail sales in March were 1 per cent less than in the same month last year. The district as a whole show a per cent gain in the month.

Underwriters Hear Miss Jones

Women purchased at least 25 per cent of all life insurance issued in 1942, Miss Beatrice Jones told members of the District of Columbia Life Underwriters Association at a meeting yesterday in the Willard Hotel.

Miss Jones, a certified life underwriter, is the first woman president ever elected by the New York City Chapter and is the first of her sex to address the local group. In her talk yesterday Miss Jones recommended that insurance salesmen direct more of their efforts to "sell" women clients.

"Women are thoroughly desirable clients," she said. "Insurance on the lives of women shows a spectacular persistency—prompt payment of premiums, high premium business and if they like you they will reduce your prospecting efforts."

Following the talk, three members of the association were elected to serve three-year terms on the board of directors. They are John L. McElfresh of Connecticut Mutual, Leroy J. Myers of Mutual Life of New York, and J. Donald Sutherland of Northwestern.

Charles F. Suter, first vice president of the association, presided at the luncheon session. A plaque was unveiled, honoring members of the association now in the armed forces.

War Financing Needs Impetus, Bankers Told

By the Associated Press

New York, May 6.—William M. Robbins, chairman of the Treasury's War Finance Committee, declared today that despite the overwhelming success of the second war loan which was oversubscribed by five billion dollars, financial mobilization in the Nation is lagging.

"America does not yet wholly understand how vitally necessary it is for us to fight with our dollars as well as with our machines and our men," he told the National Association of Mutual Savings Banks at a luncheon meeting.

Crisis in Inflation Fight

From Winthrop W. Aldrich, chairman of the board of the Chase National Bank, the meeting heard that the United States is "at a crucial point in the battle against inflation." Aldrich called for resistance to demands for higher wages and prices.

Robbins said that only 16 per cent of the 18 billion dollars raised in the war loan drive represented securities purchased by individuals and only 7 per cent represented the purchase of "E" bonds, known as "the people's bond."

The Treasury official said, however, that on the record to date "there seems to be no necessity for compulsory savings."

"If we are to avoid postwar inflation and overexpansion," Aldrich said, "and if we are to avoid the impoverishment of the middle classes, which have contributed the bulk of our national savings; if we are to avoid economic debacle, we must take appropriate measures now.

Must Keep Down Costs

"We must keep down the cost of production. We must not give way to the demands of organized minority groups for increased wages or higher commodity prices. We must make the rationing system work by prcaticing self-denial as individuals and by giving support to the enforcing agencies."

Aldrich told the bankers that they should preach the old-fashioned doctrine of "work and save" in order that America might "hold the line" against the threat of inflation.

Wounded D.C. Officer Noting 20th Birthday

Somewhere in Australia today one of Washington's youngest and most distinguished heroes is celebrating a "double" birthday which brings him to the ripe old age of 20.

DE YOUNG

First Lieut. Dan De Young is the son of Mrs. Helen K. De Young, 1629 Columbia Road Northwest. One year ago today en route to the Pacific battle zone he crossed the International Date Line and missed his birthday, because that's where the calendar leaps ahead a day. He has been wounded twice in action, received the Purple Heart and has been promoted from second to first lieutenant.

Dan was only 18 when he received his commission in February, 1942. He sailed for foreign duty in April last year and missed his birthday when the convoy he was on crossed that line in the Pacific when the calendar leaps ahead a day.

Dan's wounds occurred during the battle for Buna in New Guinea, last December.

U. S. Makes Arrests in Attempt To Nip Spud Black Market

By Christine Sadler
Post Staff Writer

The Office of Price Administration yesterday announced plans to nip in the bud a black market developing in the early crop of new Irish potatoes.

Investigators were sent into major shipping centers throughout the South and Southwest and to approximately 30 of the country's principal terminal market areas.

Arrests already have been made, the OPA said, and more can be expected as willful violators of price ceilings are tracked down. An OPA check-up has shown some of the "black marketing" has been quite open, with shippers calmly invoicing potatoes ceilinged at $2.50 a 100 pounds and "substantially higher prices."

Country shipper ceilings in the States where early crops are being harvested range from $2.40 to $2.50 per hundred pounds, except for Florida, where a maximum of $3.10 has been permitted.

These ceilings are higher than for the old potato crop, so an increase in the legal maximum pound price in Washington stores can be anticipated as the new potatoes come in. The local ceilings in chain stores of this city is now around 5 cents a pound.

Food Administrator Chester C. Davis yesterday reported to Economic Stabilization Director James F. Byrnes that the potential farm labor supply of the country is now "sufficient to produce and harvest a 1943 crop up to the levels of announced goals."

The farm machinery situation is not entirely satisfactory, Davis said, but fertilizer has been assured for full war crop use and 75 per cent of the normal need made available for other crops, such as corn and cotton.

Other food news developments yesterday included:

1. An advance authorized in the price of bread for cities in Utah, North Dakota, and Minnesota, following a correspondence between Director Byrnes and Price Administrator Prentiss Brown.

The Price Administrator said a price war had been in progress when prices were frozen and that consequently prices were so low bakeries might have to go out of business. Either a subsidy or a consumer increase was necessary, he pointed out. Byrnes ruled that the unusual conditions made a price increase justifiable and in line with "hold the line" orders.

Brown told the Stabilization Director that he considered his duty to be that of "first exhausting all means of relieving the situation without resorting to action which will raise the cost of living in the area."

If this is done and the local supply still is threatened, Byrnes replied, a "temporary price increase may be allowed" subject to later change or modification.

2. The Bureau of Agricultural Economics warned that only a comparatively small quantity of corn may be available for shipment to "deficit" areas for livestock feeding during 1943-44.

Feed supplies in the Eastern States, where large dairy herds are concentrated, therefore may depend on shipments of feed wheat to the area and on imports of feed grains from Canada, BAE said.

The South, likewise, "may become more dependent on increased shipments of Government wheat for feeding during 1943-44."

3. A Senate agriculture subcommittee started investigation of complaints that the War Production Board had refused to release building materials for necessary quick-freezing plants that would prevent spoilage of war-needed foods.

4. The Agricultural News Service reported that the Nation's wartime backyard chicken raisers already have bought, and "presumably are planning to feed and house" more than 62½ million baby chicks.

This is a minimum estimate, the service said, and covers only the first three months of the year—while most hatcheries report they will deliver at full blast through June and July.

The hatchery output of chickens shipped to all growers during the first quarter totaled 455,764,000 chicks—or an increase of 16 per cent above production in the same period last year.

Need for More Workers Presages National 48-Hour Week

A 48-hour work week for the entire Nation was officially said to be under consideration yesterday, while at the same time another urgent note to the manpower situation was provided on Capitol Hill by Manpower Chairman Paul V. McNutt, who said 2,700,000 more workers will be needed for industry by the end of this year with 1,900,000 of these to be women.

WMC officials disclosed that a Nation-wide 48-hour work week has been under study for several weeks as part of the commission's concerted effort to conserve available manpower for industry. It was estimated that such an action, if found workable, would release 500,000 workers to fill other jobs created by expanding war industries.

At present, the 48-hour week has been ordered for 39 labor shortage areas and for three industries on a Nation-wide basis. The industries are steel, which came under the 48-hour order Sunday, lumbering and nonferrous metals mining.

Biggest problem in establishing a 48-hour week on a country-wide basis, WMC officials said, is the obvious need of exemptions for certain types of work or concerns.

Another possible danger of a national 48-hour week, WMC officials pointed out, is that it might create unemployment in labor surplus areas unless workable provisions can be established.

WMC officials disclosed that the steel order was approved nine to three at last week's meeting of 12 regional manpower directors and that it subsequently was passed by WPL's labor-management committee.

McNutt, as part of yesterday's manpower picture, told the House Military Affairs Committee, now holding hearings on the Austin-Wadsworth National Service Bill, that drafting of labor will be unnecessary for some time to come.

McNutt said the Manpower Commission relies upon four million unemployed women, who have signified their willingness to take war jobs, as a reserve which will make this type of drafting unnecessary.

The number of employed women reached 15,200,000 in March, he revealed. This, he said, was an all-time high for this kind of employment.

A MILLION

POLISH HOSTAGES

OF THE

AMERICAN PEOPLE

IN JANUARY, 1939, Hitler proposed to Poland that she join Germany in an attack on Soviet Russia and divide the spoils.

POLAND REFUSED

SEVEN MONTHS LATER Hitler proposed to Soviet Russia that she join Germany in an attack on Poland and divide the spoils.

RUSSIA ACCEPTED

This was the origin of this war

By her decision to fight against two totalitarian powers—35 million peaceful and unmobilized people against 250 million spiritually and materially prepared for ruthless warfare — relying only on her agreement of mutual aid with England, Poland gained through the total self-sacrifice of her people nine precious months for her unprepared allies. It is idle speculation to contemplate what would have happened if, on September 1st, 1939, Germany had attacked France and England instead of Poland.

During those nine months Soviet Russia, in the process of dividing the spoils with Germany, violated every human law and the entire code of Christian ethics in her treatment of the people of Poland, who saved her life by refusing to combine against her with Germany.

About two million people, including children and aged women, were deported as slaves to be tortured under inhuman conditions of enforced labor without adequate clothing, food and shelter.

Over half a million have already died. Barely 125,000 were permitted to leave.

The rest, above a million, have been deprived of the last vestige of their identity — namely their citizenship, taken away from them January 16th of this year. Now these unhappy victims are held as HOSTAGES to be used as pressure in enforcing Soviet Russia's unjust territorial demands on Poland—on her and our ally.

The severance of relations between Soviet Russia and Poland has deprived these victims of the last hope they had —their own government's feeble protection.

These hostages thus become the charges of the United Nations, especially the British and American people.

Three and a half long, torturous years of extermination by foe and ally alike have not broken the backbone of the proud people of Poland. They have anchored their faith to the American principle of justice and fair play. They and Europe with them will endure as long as this anchor holds.

All Europe looks to us through the eyes of this million hostages. All Europe's faith hinges on what we do now to save them from disaster. Unlike the unfortunate victims of Hitler in Germany, these people in Soviet Russia are accessible. If millions of dollars of American lend-lease goods can go into Russia daily—these innocent victims can and must come out of Russia before it is too late, before the stigma of guilt blots our conscience.

Regardless of the outcome of the present crisis, let us save this million hostages and thereby remove this immediate cause of discord between our two allies and thus serve the war effort!

Let us hold the moral line of this war!

Roger Wolff Baffles Nats as Macks Win, 7 to 0

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

Philadelphia, May 5.—At his own expense, Al Schacht is going to Washington on the night of May 24 to stage his rollicking baseball clown act as part of the war bond game program. He didn't need any coaxing. "That's my town," says Schacht, "remember the Fourth of July, 1920?"

POVICH

Of all the 166 Independence Days America has celebrated, Schacht rates the Fourth of July, 1776, and the Fourth of July, 1920, one-two in point of historical achievement.

At the drop of a hint that Schacht was never a great pitcher, Al relates what happened that July 4 afternoon in 1920. "Ha! That day will live," he says. "It was the day that Schacht proved he was better than 4-F as a pitcher. Ask Clark Griffith. No, never mind. I'll tell you about it myself. Griff may not give all the credit where all the credit is due."

Schacht didn't have any reputation as a clown those days, and he was aiming at no such career. "I was trying to be a straight man. Mr. Griffith bought me as a pitcher from Jersey City. He got a lot of letters signed 'A. Fan,' telling him what a great pitcher I was, and he finally fell for 'em and came down and scouted me. I was telling the truth when I signed those letters 'A. Fan.' I was a baseball fan ever since I could read the box scores.

"Well, they had another pretty good pitcher with the Washington club along about that time. Name of Walter Johnson. This Johnson was pretty famous. He had just pitched a no-hit game up in Boston. The Yankees were coming in to Griffith Stadium for the Fourth of July game, and Mr. Griffith had advertised that Johnson would pitch.

"Wotta crowd. About 25,000 people out there to see Johnson pitch against Babe Ruth and the Yanks. But Mr. Griffith was sick. For the first time in his life, Johnson came up with a sore arm. After that no-hit game, he couldn't reach up to comb his hair with his pitching arm, it was that sore. He couldn't pitch, and Mr. Griffith was in an awful spot.

"The crowd didn't know what was up until they started to announce the batteries, first New York's and then Washington's. When the announcer yelled, 'For Washington, Schacht and ——' they never did get the name of the Washington catcher. When they heard the word Schacht, and knew Johnson wasn't pitching, they booed so loud everything else was drowned out.

"They were still booing when I went out to pitch. They knew I was a busher. They'd come out to see Johnson. I wanted to crawl in a hole, but I couldn't find one.

"Well, that was Schacht's big day in baseball. I beat the Yankees, 4 to 1. Babe Ruth didn't get a loud foul off me. Struck him out twice. They were cheering me from the fifth inning on. I was a hero, I tell ya. Mr. Griffith gave me a bonus."

And how many games did Schacht win that season?

"Thirteen. One in Washington that day and the other 12 in New Haven afterwards. I wonder why they released me?"

Griffith hired Schacht back as a coach in 1922, buying his release from the New Haven club for $300. He coached for Griffith's teams for 12 years, marked chiefly by his salary wrangles with the Nats' owner.

"You've got a soft job," Griffith used to tell Schacht. "Out there coaching on third base with no worries or anything. You don't know how lucky you are. I have all the responsibilities of the club. If we don't have good teams and draw the crowds, I'm always worried the sheriff is going to walk up some day and take the club away from me."

"Know what I used to tell Mr. Griffith when he gave me that line," said Schacht. "I used to tell him, 'O. K. Mr. Griffith, here's what I'll do. You take my job with my dough and no worries, and I'll take all your worries and your salary.'"

It was great repartee, apparently. "He used to kid me," Schacht said, "about what a soft job a third base coach had. 'Listen,' he'd say, 'you don't earn any pay half the time out there coaching at third base. When we're up against Lefty Grove or Urban Shocker and those good pitchers, we never get a runner as far as third.'"

Joe Cronin must have considered Schacht a smart third base coach. When Cronin got the job managing the Red Sox in 1935, he asked his father-in-law, Mr. Griffith, to release Schacht so he could coach for him at Boston.

About six years ago, Schacht discovered he could make $30,000 a year barnstorming as a clown around the Nation's baseball parks. "And to think," he says, "I was giving it away all those years when I thought my clown act was part of my coaching job."

Bithorn Again Stops Cards, Cubs Win, 5-1

By the Associated Press

Chicago, May 6.—Hi Bithorn, the Chicago Cubs' Puerto Rican right-hander, smothered the St. Louis Cardinals for the second time in eight days today as the Chicagoans beat the world's champions, 5 to 1, to capture the series 2 games to 1. It was the season's third victory for the big right-hander.

Bithorn, who pitched a seven-hit shutout at St. Louis last Thursday, held the Cards scoreless again until the ninth inning while his mates picked up a run off Harry Gumbert on a pass and singles by Bill Nicholson and Heinz Becker in the fourth inning. The Cubs then blasted their 1942 nemesis from the scene in the midst of a four-run seventh inning.

A double by Stan Hack ekited Gumbert with two runs in and two more on in the seventh after singles by Harry Lowrey, Chico Hernandez and Bithorn opened the inning. Eddie Stanky, Rookie second baseman, then singled home the other two runs off reliever Harry Brecheen.

Singles by Stan Musial and Ray Sanders, followed by Harry Walker's outfield fly scored the Cardinal run in the ninth.

N. L. Rules Lou Novikoff Ineligible

Lou Novikoff

By Charles Dunkley
Associated Press Sports Writer

Chicago, May 6—Outfielder Lou Novikoff, stubbornly holding out on the Chicago Cubs for 47 days, was placed on baseball's ineligible list today.

Yet, that does not end the holdout campaign of Comrade Novikoff, the celebrated mad Russian. Lou, who is asking $10,000 as compared to the $6000 the Cubs are offering, was reported from his Long Beach, Calif., retreat to be willing to take a little less than $10,000, but not $4000 less. That, he considered, was an insult.

Novikoff was placed on the ineligible list by Ford Frick, president of the National League, as a result of correspondence with James T. Gallagher, general manager of the Chicago Cubs.

The ruling, applied for Novikoff's failure to report within 10 days after the start of the championship season, means even if the Russian ends his holdout, he still will have to be reinstated by Frick before he can don a uniform.

Novikoff, a .300 hitter last year, has referred to his holdout campaign as a "war of nerves" with the Cubs' business manager, but Gallagher seemingly has not been at all perturbed over the Russian's apparent stubborn attitude.

"That guy isn't half as stubborn as I am, Buddy Boy," Gallagher piped, refusing to say another word.

Gallagher had considerable success dealing with three other Cub holdouts during spring training. He roped in Eddie Stanky, rookie shortstop; Bill Nicholson, an outfielder, and catcher Clyde McCullough, laid up since opening day with a fractured ankle. All of them had refused to come to salary terms earlier.

Thus Novikoff remains the only willful absentee in the major leagues.

Tomorrow the Cubs launch the first leg of a road trip that will take them to Cincinnati, New York, Brooklyn and Philadelphia, and they expect to find out their ultimate future in the National League pennant race—with or without Novikoff.

None of the club's four outfielders is hitting .300. Up to today's game with the St. Louis Cardinals Nicholson was batting .265, Dominic Dallessandro .238, Harry Lowrey .217 and Phil Cavarretta .167.

Liberty Ship 'Knute Rockne' Is Launched

The ship was sponsored by Miss Joan Shaw, 17-year-old daughter of L. T. (Buck) Shaw, Santa Clara coach and Notre Dame tackle under Rockne. Coach Shaw released the launching trigger.

Also participating were Marchmont Schwartz, Stanford head coach, who played on Rockne's last team before his death in an airplane crash, and Keene Fitzpatrick, San Francisco, classmate and teammate of "The Rock." Schwartz represented the coach's widow, Mrs. Knute Rockne, at her request.

Harvard U. Quits Grid For Duration

Yale, Princeton Are Not Affected; 4 Reasons Given For Surprise Move

By the Associated Press

Cambridge, Mass., May 6.—Harvard announced tonight its withdrawal from formal intercollegiate football for the duration, and the question was raised immediately whether the scrapping of this eight game "big-time" schedule might precipitate a blackout on college football as it has been known in the Northeast.

The other two members of the one-time "Big Three"—Yale and Princeton—promptly said nay.

"Sorry over the action," commented Howard Odell, Eli football coach, "but it won't affect us at all. We don't expect any trouble filling the date."

Princeton to Carry On

At Princeton, Acting Director of Athletics Asa Bushnell said: "Plans for continuing football at Princeton have not been abandoned and no abandonment is contemplated at this time. We will proceed slowly in adjusting our '43 schedule, which listed eight games until the Harvard cancellation."

The possibility of crumbling schedules seemed apparent.

W. H. McCarter, director of athletics at Dartmouth, said he regretted that Harvard found it necessary to cancel its football schedule, adding:

"At Dartmouth there is not sufficient detailed information upon which to base a final decision but we are hopeful of maintaining modified schedules in all sports, especially with other institutions having V-12 (Naval College Training Program) units."

In announcing the discontinuance, C. F. Getchell, acting manager of the Harvard Athletic Association, said its policy was determined by four factors:

Factors Named

Reduction in undergraduates available to participate in sports; heavy demands for use of the university's facilities for war-training programs by the Army and Navy (nearly 4000 are already in training at Harvard under such programs); the accelerated academic schedule and the increased burden of laboratory work on many students taking sciences for training in the war effort, and repeated requests of the Office of Defense Transportation to curtail all travel not necessary for the promotion of the war effort.

Getchell explained that Harvard would continue intramural football and might possibly arrange informal games with teams in the immediate vicinity as the season develops.

At New York Dr. Edward E. Elliott, Columbia director of athletics, commented that Harvard's action did not come as a surprise and said that the Lions probably would schedule some Army camp team to replace Harvard on October 2.

Dr. Walter H. Snell, the Brown athletic director, said his university would not attempt to make any 1943 football plans until after the new semester opens on July 1.

Dom DiMaggio, Naval Training Outfielder, Rated Brother's Equal in Defense Ability

War Bond Game Tickets Will Go On Sale Wednesday

When the Norfolk Naval Station team moves into Griffith Stadium on the night of May 24 to battle the Nats in the War Bond game, it will have in center field the man who can travel for a fly ball farther than any outfielder with the possible exception of his brother.

That would mean Dominic DiMaggio to baseball fans. If there was a better defensive outfielder in the big leagues than Dominic, it was his brother Joe of the Yankees. Up in Boston, where Dom was the town's toast for three years, Red Sox fans never did concede that Joe DiMaggio was the better outfielder. They could put up some stout arguments, too.

As Boston fans saw it, brother Joe excelled Dominic only in hitting. Too the arguments that Joe had the more powerful throwing arm, Bostonians countere with, "Yeah, but Dom's throwing is more accurate."

For sheer ability to get over the ground, the two DiMaggios were generally rated faster outfielders than any others in the majors.

It was on fielding round balls that Boston fans could probably claim an edge for the younger of the Di Maggios.

Dominic's catch of Brother Joe's tremendous drive to center field in Yankee Stadium a couple of years ago still stands as one of the great all-time outfield catches in that park. Dominic went nearly to the 450-foot sign to take the ball over his shoulder and rob Joe of a home run.

When the disgusted Joe came back to the Yankees' bench he said: "My father robbed me of that home run. That's what I get for having a younger brother in the family.

With the Norfolk team, young Di Maggio is playing center field, flanked by Don Padgett in right and Jim Carlin in left. He covers a good share of the territory in both directions.

On Wednesday morning, every bank in Washington will start the sale of tickets to the war bond bond battle. To each purchaser of a war bond will go a ticket to the game at no further cost.

It was originally announced that tickets would go on sale at 30 Washington banks Monday, but late last night the Treasury Department stated it had met with delay in printing and checking and that they would not be available before Wednesday.

The tickets may be exchanged for seats to the game at Griffith Stadium box office on any day after May 12, between the hours of 2 and 8 p. m.

Yank Score Twice Over Bosox, 2-1, 5-4

By International News Service

New York, May 6.—The New York Yankees today defeated the Boston Red Sox in both ends of a double-header, 2 to 1 and 5 to 4, to make it seven victories for the home forces in eight starts this season against the Boston club.

Big Ernie Bonham scored his third victory of the season when Charley Keller poled a 407-foot triple in the seventh and scored on a fly by Joe Gordon to break a 1-to-1 deadlock and sew up the first game. Bonham scored the win over Oscar Judd, each hurler allowing nine hits.

In the nightcap, Rookie Tommy Byrne started for the Yanks, but his wildness forced him out in the first inning when the Sox romped to a four-run lead. Bill Zuber, Jim Turner and Johnny Murphy pitched shutout ball the rest of the way for the Yanks and the latter won the game with one run in the seventh, three in the eighth to tie it and one in the ninth to clinch it.

One was out in the ninth when George Stirnweiss singled and Roy Weatherly's bunt was handled too slowly, both hands being safe. Keller then bunted and pitched Mace Brown threw the ball away, Stirnweiss scoring.

Indians Beat White Sox, 6-3, Behind Smith

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, May 6.—Five Chicago White Sox hurlers paraded before the Cleveland Indians today and were hammered for 11 hits as the Tribe took a 6-to-3 victory to end the series.

Southpaw Al Smith, 34-year-old Indian veteran, yielded 11 hits to the Sox, but kept them scattered and ineffective.

Cleveland's triumph was built on two big innings, the third and seventh, with three runs collected in each.

Jake Wade was removed from the White Sox slab in the third in favor of Bill Swift, who was removed for a pinch hitter and replaced by Orval Grove. Grove was relieved in the sixth by Joe Haynes. Don Hanski, White Sox newcomer, pitched the last inning.

Nats Open Nocturnal Season Tonight; Wynn Faces Red Sox

Griffith Stadium's first night game of the season is scheduled for this evening when the Nats return from their road trip to start a four-game series with the Red Sox. Game time is 8:30 o'clock.

Advance ticket sales indicated a crowd of more than 20,000 for the contest.

Early Wynn, without a victory in his first three starts of the season, will pitch against the remodeled Boston club.

The Red Sox, most heavily hit of any team by the military draft and enlistments, are operating without Outfielders Ted Williams, Dom DiMaggio and Lou Finney, and Shortstop Johnny Peaky.

In left field for Boston will be 40-year-old Al Simmons, who came out of retirement to join the Red Sox after an earlier career with the Athletics, White Sox, Tigers, Nats and Reds.

Pyle Routed By Bunts, Wildness

Griffs Collect Ten Safeties, Fail To Score; Errors Aid to Downfall

By Shirley Povich
Post Staff Writer

Philadelphia, May 6.—Roger Wolff, who is 3-A in the draft, was A-1 on the pitching mound for the Athletics this afternoon and made the Nats look exceedingly 4-F as he shut them out, 7 to 0.

While Wolff was befuddling the Nats with his knuckle ball, his colleagues were making a mess of the pitching record of Ewald Pyle, Washington's left-hander, who endured for only two innings today.

The Nats made 10 hits and sticked the ball very well, except when Wolff buckled down with runs in scoring position, at which point the Nats didn't hit at all.

Bunting Attack Routs Pyle

The Athletics got Pyle out of there with a bunting attack in the first two innings, although his own wildness was no help to him. They laid down five bunts in those first two innings, got two runs home in each, and had a 4-0 lead when a pinch hitter suddenly appeared for Pyle in the third.

Johnny Sullivan's fumble of Johnny Welaj's grounder in the opening inning put Pyle on the spot and he aggravated it when he walked White with none as yet out. A sacrifice by Mayo moved the runners up and Pyle walked Estalella, to fill the bases. Siebert knocked in a run with a single off Vernon's glove and Suder squeezed another run home with a sacrifice bunt.

Pyle got no help from his supporting cast in the second inning, either, after Swift led off with a double against the left-field wall. Wolff laid down a bunt and Vernon snatched the ball up and made a perfect throw to third base—perfect with the exception that he had no business making it, inasmuch as Third Baseman Clary also was fielding the bunt and nobody was playing third at the moment. On Vernon's error, Swift scored. A bit later, White singled and the Athletics squeezed another run home on Mayo's sacrifice bunt.

Former Nats Make Hits

Owen Scheetz got the pitching job commencing with the third and didn't distinguish himself at all in the fourth when the A's collared him for three hits and three runs. Welaj signaled for one of the three hits of the day by this former Nat, and another former pal, Bobby Estalella, also singled. The big blow of the inning, though, was Pete Suder's three

Four Horses Expected to Start in Preakness Tomorrow

Mysterious Partido May Run in Race

Hall, Marlboro Man, Purchased 3-Yr.-Old Last Week To Run in Classic

The Post learned late last night that Robert L. Hall, jr. of Upper Marlboro, Md., would be given permission to start Partido in the Preakness. A representative of Hall phoned Robert J. Kleberg, manager of King Ranch at Kingsville, Tex., who said that he would wire a transfer of the nomination of the colt to Pimlico this morning in time for the Preakness entries.

By Walter Haight
Post Staff Writer

Pimlico, May 6.—It looks as though 3½ horses will run in the Preakness Saturday. Entries for the mile and three-sixteenths classic will be made tomorrow morning and from all indications the list will include Mrs. John D. Hertz's Count Fleet, Allen T. Simmons' Blue Swords, W. L. Brann's Vincentive and Robert L. Hall, jr.'s, Partido.

Count Fleet, of course, is the gallant winner of the 1943 Kentucky Derby. Blue Swords was second in the Louisville show. Vincentive has shown good form hereabout to earn a starting chance. That leaves Partido and the question "Who is Partido"? He is a 3-year-old by Menow out of Split Second and is owned by Bob Hall of Upper Marlboro, Md., a beer distributor.

Partido was claimed for $3500 by Hall last week from the King Ranch and has done no running of any consequence. However, before Partido can take part in the Preakness, Hall must obtain permission from the King Ranch for a transfer of the nomination on the horse. Efforts were being made last night for the change. Handlers of the horse admit that they are aiming at fourth money of $2000.

The cost for entry in the race is $500, so minus jockey fee and expenses, the angle looks like a sure profit in the neighborhood of $1300 besides the glory (?) of having one's colors in so important an event.

The Preakness contenders fell to three when W. E. Boeing's Slide Rule, third behind Count Fleet and Blue Swords at Churchill Downs, was withdrawn after a workout in New York.

Blue Swords, was indulged in an easy half-mile over the Pimlico oval this morning, airing the distance in 55. He was under plenty of wraps all the way. Saturday morning the Blue Larkspur colt will be sharpened with a quarter-mile test for speed. "That's all the training he needs," said Trainer Walter Kelley. "After that mile and a quarter of the Kentucky Derby, he's ready to run over the Rocky Mountains."

Vincentive, the Maryland home bred in the stable of W. L. Brann and the only other serious Preakness prospect, loped around the mile oval twice this morning, with the exercise boy standing up in the stirrup all the way. "I'll just open him up tomorrow and run him," said Trainer Christmas "That'll be sufficient."

Fort Hill, Beall Tied

Cumberland, May 6.—Fort Hill defeated LaSalle, 2-0, and Beall of Frostburg won over Hyndman, Pa., 15-10, to tie for first place in the Tri-State Interscholastic Baseball League with three won and none lost.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

Indianapolis, May 6.—The American Legion, which has its National headquarters here, has received its annual grant of $20,000 from the two Big Leagues and is busy lining up another one of its tremendous junior baseball seasons. Half a million American boys are involved.

CONSIDINE

Last year 36,000 teams—teams, not players—participated in the American Legion national championships. Teams are composed of 15 players. The finals, held in Manchester, N. H., were won by the Los Angeles team sponsored by Sunrise Post No. 357. A good chunk of those kids some day will be major leaguers.

At this time, most of the graduates of Legion baseball are going into the Armed Forces. A survey taken recently by Homer Chaillaux, the Legion's National Director of Americanism (Legion baseball comes under that department), showed that of the 15,000 young ball players who have played on sectional or regional championship teams, and in junior world series, the enormous total of 94 per cent is now in the service.

Over the past 17 years of Legion baseball, about five million boys have competed. The 94 per cent ratio, of course, doesn't hold true all the way down the line, but the Legion is justly proud that it does hold true of the boys who proved to be better than average players. In the Legion's mind, this means that its baseball program is a success, for the aim of the Legion in baseball is the development of health through sports, and pride in our country.

This year's Legion baseball season will open in countless villages and cities on June 30. Only amateurs who must not have reached their seventeenth birthday before January 1, 1943, are eligible. It is the last baseball a lot of these kids will play. City, county and congressional district titles will first be decided, then State and regional tournaments will be played. Finally it will boil down to four sectional winners, and when only two of these are left they will enter the junior world series. It used to be played where the annual Legion convention was held, but now it goes to the town of one of the competing teams. The $20,000 which the big leagues give to the program is used for travelling expenses. The Legion treasury makes up the rest—usually about $15,000.

The Legion hasn't any doubt that the schedule will be completed. It is the one section of the game of baseball that has no draft fears.

Legion baseball started in 1925 as an idea in the head of Frank McCormick, former athletic head at the University of Minnesota. He talked to his friend, Maj. John L. Griffith, head of the Big Ten, about the project and the two of them went to see Judge Landis. They swung the judge on several counts (1) that it would build healthier young men in this country, (2) that it would sharpen patriotism, and (3) it would do much to stop the inroads then being made into baseball by golf, tennis, etc.

But no money was immediately obtained from the leagues. In 1926 the Legion underwrote an intersectional tournament at the Philadelphia convention, and among those present were Landis, Clark Griffith and Tom Shibe. There was no tournament in 1927 because the convention was held in Paris. But in 1928, after a West Virginia legionnaire named Dan Sowers took charge of the baseball program, he went to work on the judge again and the upshot of it was that Landis gave the Legion $50,000 for baseball. The Legion got the same sum in 1929, 1930 and 1931—and the program soared toward its present heights.

The majors couldn't afford to give anything in 1932, but in 1933 they gave $20,000 and have been doing it each year since then. Their investment in Legion baseball is now $370,000.

Has it been worth it? Most assuredly. The majors entered upon the program with the sole purpose of helping kids. But, as it turned out, the majors were inadvertently (but happily) helping themselves. For Legion baseball has been a fruitful breeding ground for big leaguers. Here's a pretty good team of boys who got their start in Legion baseball:

Outfielders, Ted Williams, George Case, Chet Laabs, Augie Galan and Mike McCormick; infielders, Bobby Doerr, Johnny Pesky, Joe Gordon, Vernon Stephens, Buddy Lewis, Phil Cavarretta, Cookie Lavagetto and Eddie Joost; catchers, Birdie Tebbetts, Buddy Rosar, Mickey Owen, and a pretty fair pitching staff composed of Bobby Feller, Mort Cooper, Kirby Higbe, Johnny Rigney, Jim Bagby, Fred Hutchinson, Rube Melton and Howard Pollet.

Phillies Beat Dodgers, 3-2; Newsom Loser

By the Associated Press

Brooklyn, May 6.—The Philadelphia Phillies bumped off Brooklyn's National League leaders today for the second time in their four-game series, winning 3 to 2, in 10 innings.

Unlike yesterday's weird 18-6 affair, today's tussle was a pitching duel between bespectacled John Podgajny, who held the Dodgers to five hits, and Buck Newsom, who allowed six.

The Phillies twice came from behind to tie the score and won in the tenth when Glen Stewart opened with a triple and came home on Ron Northey's tremendous fly.

Newsom, winner of two games without a defeat previously, struck out nine and issued only three walks, but two of them came in succession in the fifth to force in a run. Brooklyn scored a run without a hit in the same inning.

Erickson, Mooty Sent to Minors By Chicago Cubs

Chicago, May 6 (AP).—A few hours before the start of their first extended road trip of the season, the Chicago Cubs reduced traveling weight today by optioning two pitchers to minor league affiliates, sending Paul Erickson to the Milwaukee club of the American Association, and Jake Mooty to the Los Angles club of the Pacific Coast League.

Mooty, 29, has been with the Cubs continuously since 1940, after being drafted from Syracuse, but handicapped by a perennial sore arm, never quite reached expectations. Last year he won two and lost five games.

Browns Beat Tigers in Ninth On Squeeze, 1-0

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, May 6.—The St. Louis Browns broke the Detroit Jinx today, pushing over a run in the ninth to beat the Tigers 1 to 0 for the first time in five games this season.

Another first was Vernon Stephens' failure to hit. The Browns' shortstop, league leading batter, connected safely in each of the previous 10 games starting with the opener.

Left-handed Hal Newhouser and Denny Galehouse matched each other in effectiveness throughout the game and not a man reached third until the ninth when the Tigers had a chance to win.

3 Interhigh Teams May Lose Out Today

Race Tightens for Berths in Play-Offs; Central and Roosevelt Clash in Feature

One team, and possibly two others, will drop out of the title picture this afternoon when three interhigh games are listed. The loser of the Western-Coolidge affair will drop by the wayside with the winner still having a chance at second place. Anacostia will probably be eliminated as they tangle with favored Tech, lodged in second place.

Best game of the day will be between Central and Roosevelt. All encounters get under way at 4 o'clock.

Other games on the docket today are: Gonzaga at Eastern, in the feature outside tilt, with Gilbert Lansdale and Bucky Glorious opposing hurlers; Devitt at National Training, a game between two losing clubs; Friends at Landon, in the traditional battle between the two schools; Bethesda-Chevy Chase at St. Albans, with the Saints favored to bounce back in the win column after Tuesday's loss to Gonzaga; and Fredericksburg at George Washington High, in a northern Virginia conference tussle.

Meet at Wilson

A triangular track meet is also booked for 4 o'clock. Tech High's defending interhigh champions and Fairfax will journey to Wilson to participate in a three-way meet. Tech is replacing George Washington High as the third team. The Presidents were scheduled to compete but withdrew.

The Roosevelt-Central game shapes up as a humdinger, even though the Riders did absorb a 5-3 shellacking at the hands of Coolidge earlier this week. Roosevelt's lone series triumph came over Wilson in its second start while its other loss was at the hands of Tech. Leigh Joy, whose specialty is slow stuff, will take the hill against the Vikings, and will be opposed by Joe Tucker, speedball artist. Central lost its last start to league-leading Eastern but thumped Anacostia in a prior start. Roosevelt must win to remain in the running while a Central victory wuold go a long way toward aiding the Vikings to get a coveted playoff berth.

Fones on Mound

Bob Holzberlein, who turned in a brilliant game against the Riders, will probably hurl for Coolidge, and Randy Fones will go to the hill for Western. Fones owns a seven-hit victory over Wilson and might cause the Colts a lot of trouble. Harry Swisher, Anacostia's best hurler, and Milo Quail, dependable Tech twirler, will be the opposing pitchers in the Tech-Anacostia battle.

The schedule:
*Tech at Anacostia, 4 o'clock.
*Roosevelt at Central, 4 o'clock.
*Western at Coolidge, 4 o'clock.
Gonzaga at Eastern, 4 o'clock.
Devitt at National Training School, 3:30 o'clock.
Friends at Landon, 3:30 o'clock.
Bethesda at St. Albans, 3:30 o'clock.
Fredericksburg at George Washington High, 4 o'clock.
Track—Tech and Fairfax at Wilson, 4 o'clock.
*Interhigh games.

Shrimpie Second, Port Harmony 3d In 6-Horse Field; Pays $4.20 Mutuel

By a Staff Correspondent

Pimlico, May 6.—Turning in the excellent time of 1:11 2/5 for six furlongs, H. P. Metcalf's Star Copy proved the easiest kind of a winner in the Annapolis Purse, top event on today's program. The 4-year-old daughter of Trace Call and Sun Etolle was in hand while going into the finish line three lengths in front of G. T. Strother's Shrimpie, with the Howe Stable's Port Harmony third in the field of six.

The crowd of 10,000 went to Star Copy as if the race had already been run and the filly returned a $4.20 mutual. The track was fast.

Pony Ballett set the early pace, but Jockey Paul Keiper always had dead aim on the leader with Star Copy. In the stretch he clucked to the filly and she disposed of Pony Ballet without effort. Shrimpie, a recent winner, was running gamely along the inside rail but was shut off by the tiring Pony Ballet.

Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt's Tedious returned from the breeding farm to turn in an impressive victory in the sixth event. Making his first start since 1938, the 9-year-old son of Teddy and Duration set virtually all the pace, was headed by J. Y. Christmas' Rough Pass in midstretch and then came on again to win by a length and a half under a good ride by Jockey W. D. Wright. Rough Pass was second with Mrs. R. D. Patterson's Yes or No third in the group of six going a mile and a sixteenth. The winner was clocked in 1:45 2/5 and paid a $15.50 mutuel.

MAD POLICY, going in greatly improved form, took lead at once, jumped poorly at fifth and tenth fences, took wide advantage when SIMILAR fell and won easily. VALPUISEAUX was slightly bothered by FLYING FALCON at the first fence, was allowed to drop far out of it and closed a gap when placed to hand ride too late to be effective. BROADSIDE KING was in thick of contention, moved up boldly the second time around and then faltered.

RESIDUE was steadied while in first flight early, moved to contention boldly when placed to drive and held HIGH STANDARD safe at end. HIGH STANDARD was rated closest to pace of LIGHT TIDE, took command approaching stretch and fought it out with good energy. LOCH NESS, slow to begin, came boldly in closing stages but weakened right at the end.

Selections at Pimlico

Dear Al:

The mutuel windows in the infield will be opened today and tomorrow. The Maryland Jockey Club believes the Preakness-eve gathering will overflow into the center of the track. The program is topped by the Pimlico Nursery with Sir Drake, owned by Allen T. Simmons, as the probable favorite. The public has been getting a lot of phoney-baloney out of jumping races hereabouts ever since the meeting opened. There's a character around the track known for years as "Jimmy Potatoes." He used to dislike the nickname but in these times with spuds scarce he doesn't mind it at all. Leave Alone, a 2-year-old purchased by Grant Thorn for $400 as a yearling, was claimed by F. V. Feron for $2000. Lady riders will compete in the annual ladies race today. The event will be run without the mutuel department in operation and will be off at 11:30. Nine women riders will compete, including Mrs. J. H. C. Forbes, Mrs. Rachel Groff, Mrs. S. Riles, Miss Sarah Bosley, Miss Peggy Squires, Mrs. Peter Hagen, Miss Ann Harrison and Miss Judy Johnson. The breeding of Cee Raf, a fair 2-year-old prospect, has been puzzling horsemen. Trainer Bobby Curran explained that the sire, Silver Horde, is an 8-year-old son of Bull Dog which never started and stands along with Grand Slam, Jean Valjean and Invermark, at the Keeneland Farm. Alan T. Clarke will take his Mowlee brigade back to his Huntington farm and rest them before going to Garden State Park. Blanks for Laurel's 1944 Selima Stakes are available at the secretary's office. La Reigh came out of the Pimlico Oaks with a black eye. Tedious showed that five years away from the races haven't dulled his speed. The 9-year-old certainly pulled a surprise in winning yesterday's sixth event. Looks as if he is going to be a useful runner even at his age. I still would like to have six stalls at Charles Town. See you on the rail.—BILL.

First race—CHUCH is said to be a good thing and should make the most of the rail position. TRIPLE SCOTCH won and was disqualified last out. Dangerous if kept straight. PLANE SHADOW to take care of the others.

Second race—OVERLIN drops down in this field and looks like a winner under 105 pounds. STOLEN TRYST has plenty of speed. ROUGH TIME may awake with a bang.

Third race—NAYR carries top weight in the day's steeplechase but I'm forced to string along. FIELDFARE and JOLLY TAR appear best of the others.

Fourth race—CAMILLE gets in this with 102 pounds and packs enough punch to take care of these. WINE PUNCH can better that last and belongs in the thick of contention. NELL MOWLEE is a possibility.

Fifth race—SIR DRAKE, a winner here, gets my call in the Pimlico Nursery. ELRAY and BOW WAVE to fill out the money bracket.

Sixth race—GONDALINA gets the light assignment in this distance test and looks best. TAMIL has speed. ONE ONLY for the show end.

Seventh race—BABY BOY had trouble in the stretch last out and with clear sailing should defeat these. HELEN MOWLEE has a chance. BROILER for the minor award.

Eighth race—SILVER ROCKET is as good as anything in this wide open affair. DETROIT BULL and GOOD NEIGHBOR for the place and show.

Ogle's 3-Hit Hurling Beats W.-L. High, 2-0

Behind the superb three-hit pitching of Jack Ogle, Woodrow Wilson won its third straight yesterday, tripping Washington-Lee, 2-0. This was Ogle's third victory in as many starts and brought the Tigers' record to four wins and two losses.

Single tallies in the first and second frames were all that the Tiger ace needed as he was only in trouble once. In the sixth, the Generals worked men to second and third with only one out, but Ogle fanned the next two batters.

Wilson got a run in the first when Julian Owens singled, advanced to second on a passed ball and scooted home on Bill Jawish's safety. The second-frame marker was a gift of Washington-Lee's pitcher, Charley Granger. Big Mike Runnels opened the inning with a clean shot to left. Bill Tanney followed with a tap to Granger, who threw into centerfield, attempting to force Runnels. Eddie Henshaw moved the runners up with a well-placed sacrifice, and Tom McLarney loaded the bases when he got on through a fielder's choice. Granger walked Ogle, forcing in the only other run of the game.

"Turkey" Thomson relieved Granger at this point and finished the game without permitting a run. Henshaw, who took hitting honors with a double and a triple in three tries, also turned in the day's fielding play when he raced back to the broad-jumping pit in deepest centerfield to pull in Doug Drunkenmiller's long drive.

Gibson and Flores Signed for Fight

Terry Gibson, welterweight stablemate and protege of Henry Armstrong, and Primo Flores, Puerto Rican, fighting out of New York, yesterday were signed for the third eight-round bout featuring Promoter Goldie Ahearn's Uline Arena card Wednesday, May 12. Gibson fought Billy White of Baltimore a terrific six-round draw in the semifinal on the Armstrong-Turiello card.

Frankie Wills, D. C. welterweight champ, and Ernest (Cat) Robinson will meet in the featured eight-rounder, while Pedro Hernandez, who recently laced Carroll (Kid) Alexander, conqueror of Joey Archibald, will meet Paulite Jackson, Philadelphia Negro, in the third, a featherweight encounter.

Veeck Slaps A. M. Game Idea 'Theft'

Milwaukee, May 6 (AP).—To Presidents Warren Giles of the Cincinnati Reds, and Al Banister of the Columbus Redbirds, from Bill Veeck of the Milwaukee Brewers, a big loud bronx cheer.

"The Reds swiped our morning baseball game idea and drew 2997 fans," Veeck, energetic young president of the Milwaukee Baseball Club," said today. "Columbus also pulled a fast one and got only 406 out for the game.

"That's just what those robbers deserve—we could put on a dog fight and draw more than that."

Several weeks ago Veeck announced plans for morning games at his Milwaukee American Association park. He nursed the idea along and publicized it widely among Milwaukee industrial plants that have night shifts. He planned to serve breakfast cereal and milk and coffee and rolls to the early customers at the first morning game next Saturday. The plan drew such favorable response that he planned for a crowd of 5000 or more.

Then the Cincinnati Reds and Columbus of the American Association, broke in ahead of Veeck—taking the edge off his show he believes—by putting on morning games this week. Veeck hasn't been the same since.

"It was our idea," Veeck said with emphasis. "We were entitled to try it out first. Neither Cincinnati nor Columbus had any reason to put on morning games. It's for a city like Milwaukee that has many industrial war plants with night shifts.

"What happened to Giles and Banister should have happened. They weren't entitled to get crowds. They would have given us the first chance at our own idea, instead of staging it without proper preparatory work and having it flop."

Bill Slocum, Vet Baseball Scribe, Dies

By the Associated Press

New York, May 6.—Bill Slocum, 59, former New York sports writer and since 1938 baseball contact man for the General Mills Corporation, died today at St. Elizabeth's Hospital in this city.

Slocum, in ill health since the death of his wife in January, spent practically all of his life writing sports, working at various times for the New York Sun, Times, Herald-Tribune and American. At one time he was sports editor of the Hearld-Tribune and before taking over the position with General Mills worked for 12 years on the American, three of them as sports editor.

He was one of the organizers of the New York chapter of the Baseball Writers Association. He is survived by four sons, William Joseph, director of special events for the Columbia Broadcasting System; John Francis, of the publicity department of 20th Century Fox; Sgt. Charles E. of the U. S. Army and Francis Edward, who lived with his father.

Funeral services will be held from the Church of the Immaculate Conception at Waterbury, Conn., Saturday at 10 a. m.

TERRONE TO TREASURE ISLAND. Rocco Terrone, whose unit has been the admiration of Mayfair these many months, will transfer his tall talents to Treasure Island on Monday May 24. The change will involve the addition of a musician or two to the Terrone unit—added resonance for dancing, y'see. Maestro Terrone is always referred to by professionals as having the "fastest fingers in the piano business," but his unerring taste and smart ideas in making arrangements are equally important. . . . P. S.—Mayfair is preparing a beautiful (and we mean beautiful) surprise for its patrons to succeed Terrone.

Hi Hat's Saturday eve treat this week will be Pianist Paul Homer who'll play during the Banner Boys' interlude early in the evening, later hold forth in the adjoining Ambassador Room.

VANISHING RADIO. Magico Frakson, who opened at the Troika last night, disdains such trivialities as making rabbits and fish bowls appear and disappear. He makes a full sized radio evaporate before your unbelieving eyes. Also new at Troika is that exquisite person, Carol King, right from the Riobamba, where she starred with Frank Sinatra.

PARTYING 'ROUND. Louis of the Copocabana recently prepared a fine mess of polenta and rabbit stew with his own little hands, invited in seven of his friends. Among 'em we saw Buddy Barrett, the decorator, and "Mike," the pastry man." . . . Adrian Rollini, the vibraphonist superbo, came visiting his old haunts at El Patio the other evening, was given a colossal greeting by the management. . . . An Irish naval commander greeted Maestro Milton Davis of the Rainbow Room with, "Gosh, I'm glad to get here again. Even if I did have to swim part of the way." And he didn't mean maybe.

The Starlight Roof of the Roger Smith Hotel will open on Friday, May 28. Music by Myles Hallett whose niftily tailored rythms pack the hotel's Cafe Caprice every afternoon and evening.

FLOOR SHOW COSTUMERY. Princess Chio at the Lotus is flaunting the week's most daring color scheme—a magenta and light blue number with bands of brilliants . . . Jerry, of Jerry and Turk at Paul Young's, is a highly comical lass—also, she wears sports and tailored clothes better than any one we've ever seen . . . The Balalaika's "Russian Wedding" presents the richest of revue costuming—the whole cast is prinked out in gold brocades, furs and satins . . . The Evelyn Manion Dancers at the Casino Royal are doing the samba in midriff taffeta creations that are a color orgy of green, red, purple, flame, blue and orange.

NO. 1 MONDAY SENSATIONS will be the opening of the new International Room of Restaurant "400" with the Dale Sisters, John Graham and Jean Lee, and the Brown Derby's colossal offering of "Fats" Waller, Marshall Haley and the Jones Brothers.

The Dubonnet Room has a new greeter, the highly capable and cordial Rudolf. He's a graduate of New York's Hotel Pennsylvania, knows all the answers when it comes to fine service.

SWEET SOUNDS. The effects created by triple trumpet of Sandy Sandifer in the Metronome Room. People think something has happened to their eyes when they see him with a giant trumpet and their next peek shows him totaling a baby-sized affair . . . Durward Bowersox and Sid Willoughby of Burt's are putting lovely melodic ruffles on "It's Always You." Durward says he likes it because it's such a perfect steal, from "The Glow Worm". . . . When the Heintze brothers of Restaurant "823" play Strauss' "Spring. Beautiful Spring" you'll believe in the calendar instead of the temperature . . . For a thoroughly practical fellow, Ray Donahue of the Lounge Riviera has the most romancey sounding voice . . . Georgia and Jerry, newcomers at the Anchor Room, give an extra pretty twirl to "Black Magic" . . . Pianist Novella Burns of the Old New Orleans has a beguiling touch with the semiclassics, always the most popular of dinner music . . . When Joe Marsala's band plays "Don't Get Around Much Any More," it'll inspire you to want to get around to the Victory Room every night.

A perfect tribute to the authenticity of the Chinese cuisine at Ruby Foo's—Mme. Wei, wife of the Chinese Ambassador, dines there frequently.

WEEKEND FUN EXPRESS. The Louisiana, over in Georgetown, will be bouncing over the weekend with the jive a la mode as interpreted by Ray King's band . . . Kavakos Grill goes extra funzapoppin' on weekends, and on Sunday afternoon they'll have square dances—see 'em do "Bird in the Cage" . . . It's "Abbott and Costello Week" at Jack Rowe's, with La Mont and Hagan doing the impersonating . . . Between swinging fried chicken and Jimmy Ellison's music, the patrons at Burton's go frantic regularly on Fridays and Saturdays . . . River Bend is a grand place if it gets warm, a grand place if it stays chilly. Its wall are made of windows and it can be transformed from an indoor to an outdoor spot in a wave of George Stein's baton. . . . Crossroads is the goal of all earnest amusement seekers—especially after Saturday midnight.

Wood to Meet Schweitzer in Friends' Final

Brit Schweitzer' victory in the semifinal round of the Fourth Annual Sidwell Friends' Interscholastic Invitation Tennis Tournament over Jack Render of Central, gave Coolidge the team title while the individual champion will not be crowned until tomorrow. Lee Wood of Roosevelt also gained the final when he tripped Cotton Smith of St. Albans.

Render and Schweitzer, playing yesterday's feature, fought a brilliant first set, with Schweitzer finally winnnig, 9-7. The Coolidge lad easily won the second set and the team title as Render, tired from the first set, was no match for Schweitzer's slamming and clever back-hand. Wood had a fairly easy time with Smith, winnnig 6-2, 6-1.

The final round of the Boys' Tourney will also take place tomorrow, with two Friends' boys, Bobby Smith, defending champ, and Pete Hill clashing. Both finals will get under-way at 10 o'clock.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

New McNutt Order Explains Deferments

Manpower Boss Paul McNutt yesterday sent department heads instructions which shed some light on the Government's own draft policy. Heads of agencies were told in detail how to go about getting employes deferred, the rights of employes, and the procedure involved. They were told: (1) that only men within the draft age—18 to 45—were required to get a release before they voluntarily enlisted or accepted a military commission; (2) that employes within the draft age who were denied a release to join the armed services had the right to appeal to the Review Committee within 10 days, and (3) if the committee overrules the agency and grants the release the agency must release the employe within 10 days if he wants to enlist or at a time when it won't jeopardize his receiving a commission.

All requests for occupational deferment of employes in Government engaged in scientific and technical fields must be submitted direct to the Review Committee before the cases are taken up with the local boards. McNutt delegated his authority to the committee chairman, who is Robert Barnett. Other members are Kenneth Vipond of Civil Service, and Col. Edward A. Fitzpatrick of Selective Service. Before this committee passes on a case involving a scientific or technical employe it will be referred to the national War Manpower Committee covering the particular profession to determine whether the employe should be drafted. For example, a physicist would be referred to the physicist committee and as there is a shortage of physicists the employe would unquestionably be deferred.

Agencies are free to request short stays of induction upto 60 days, but copies of the requests must be sent to the review committee. Agency deferment committee are free, in most cases, to request deferments direct from the local boards. And if a local board fails to honor the request the agency is compelled to appeal the decision to the local appeals board. If this board upholds the decision, the agency must submit its case to the review committee which must authorize a further appeal. Copies of agency requests for employes to leave the country must now be filed with the review committee.

Deferment of Federal workers is based on the "key" position theory. Each agency must file a list of its key, or deferrable, positions, with the review committee and that authority will approve or reject all or part of the list within seven days. In theory only men on the lists are supposed to be considered for deferment, but it is possible to get employes deferred who aren't on the "key" list. The use of manning and replacement tables—now at use at the Navy Yard, for example—must be okayed by the review committee.

Regulations covering the Federal pay bill will include a provision which will protect employes from the compensatory time off section. The bill gives department heads the option of paying overtime or giving employes time off in payment for hours worked in excess of 48 in a single week. The regulations will give the agencies a definite period—probably either 60 or 90 days—to give the employes compensatory time off. And if the time off isn't given, the agency must pay them for the overtime work at the regular rate. In general, however, the regulations will carry on the existing practices.

One important decision was made yesterday which will be of benefit to low-paid employes. Officials drafting the regulations and the General Accounting Office agreed that the provision which limits the pay raise to 25 per cent of the base pay applies only to the $300 bonus and not to overtime pay. Here's what that means: A $1080 employe can be paid only $270 annually under the bonus provision of the bill. That's 25 per cent of his base pay. But if he works a sufficient amount of overtime to be paid $400 at the regular Government rate he'll also get the difference between $270 and $400, which is $130.

The President is expected to sign the bill soon after he receives it from Congress, probably today. An analysis of the bill already has been prepared for him and preparations are being made for the President to sign it without delay instead of sending the bill through the regular channels. Payrolls are being held up throughout the country and once the President's signature is on the bill funds will be released by Treasury to pay employes overtime from May 1. Many payrolls that will be met tomorrow won't cover overtime from May 1 because of the uncertainty over congressional action. Supplementary checks will be distributed, perhaps next week in some agencies.

District Rule Revamping Is Proposed

Hebert Measure Would Clothe Commissioners With More Power

Post Staff Writer

The first of a series of bills designed to reorganize the District government, concentrating more powers in the District Commissioners and giving them certain authorization now vested in Congress, was introduced in the House yesterday by Representative Hebert (Democrat) of Louisiana.

"The war has emphasized the need for relieving the Congress of the burden of acting upon purely administrative details of municipal government and matters of purely local interest, and at the same time of vesting the Commissioners with authority to deal promptly therewith," Hebert said.

Seven Activities

The first section of the bill gives the commissioners discretionary authority with respect to seven types of activities. It authorizes them:

1. To waive payments by persons in the military service of the United States of annual fees to the District to retain or renew any license or permit to engage in any calling or practice any profession in the District.
2. To make and enforce regulations requiring bonds from persons, other than utility companies, engaged in the following businesses in the District: Plumbing, gas fitting, heating, ventilating, airconditioning, mechanical refrigerating, and the electrical business.
3. To rent buildings, land or personal property belonging to the District when not needed for the purpose for which acquired.
4. To grant permits for the construction of tunnels and the laying of conduits and pipes in alleys, streets and avenues in the District
5. To suspend, with or without pay, officers or employes appointed by the Commissioners, and to delegate such powers to their subordinates.
6. To name and change the names of highways, bridges, buildings or other public places or property under their jurisdiction.
7. To fix and collect fees for copies of orders, regulations, permits, certificates and transcripts of records furnished by the District to the public.

Appointive Power

Section two of the proposed bill authorizes the Commissioners to appoint contracting officers, who make and administer contracts on behalf of the Commissioners. This section also authorizes the Commissioners to remit all or any part of damages imposed by any contract for delays.

Section three authorizes the Commissioners to transfer any or all of the duties, powers and authority of the Building Inspector, Plumbing Inspector and Electrical Engineer to a Director of Inspection under a Department of Inspection.

Hebert said yesterday his bill only delegates to the Commissioners those powers ordinarily vested in any municipality. He said that neither this nor any similar bill he may introduce later will place the schools in politics.

3 Marines Get Supreme Court Practice Order

Three Marine Corps officers, stationed at headquarters here, yesterday were given the authority to practice before the United States Supreme Court in a ceremony at Supreme Court chambers.

Sponsored by Henry B. Chandler, director of the administrative office of United States courts, were:

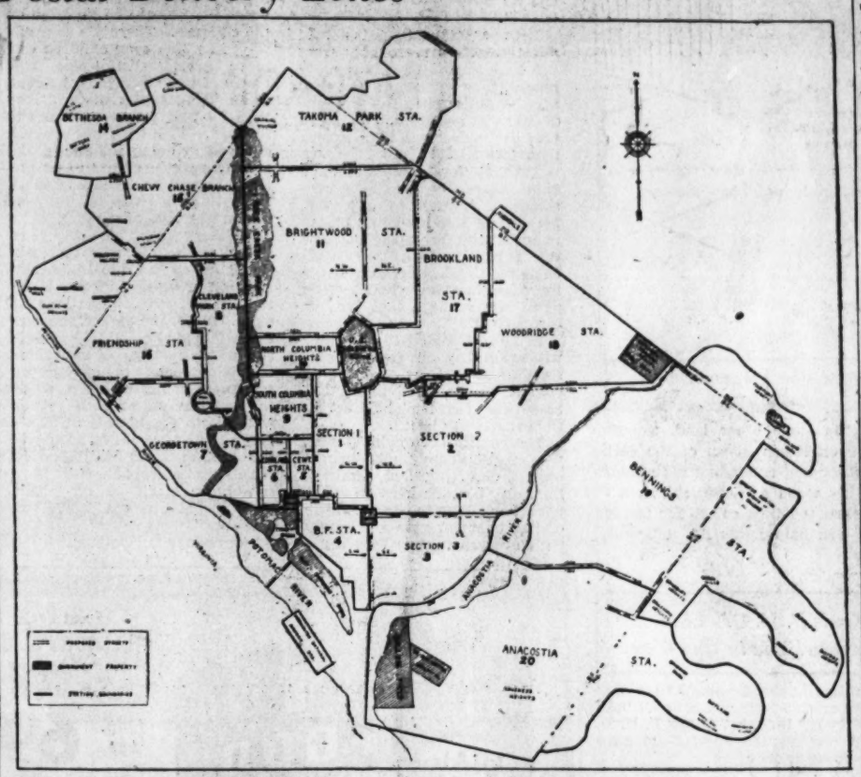
Col. Douglas W. Wingo, Capt. William E. Ahrens and Capt. Norris J. Barrat, jr.

Colonel Wingo, in civilian life president of the Birmingham (Ala.) Bar Association, served as captain in the Marine Corps during the last war and was a major in the United States Army, Infantry Reserve, from 1930 to 1939.

Captain Ahrens was Government appeal agent of Selective Service Board No. 33, in New York City, before entering the Marine Corps. Overseas in the first war as a second lieutenant in the Army, he was graduated from New York University in 1919 and received his law degree from Columbia Law School.

Captain Barrat was also a second lieutenant in the Army during World War I. He received his law degree from the University of Pennsylvania. He was at one time assistant solicitor for Philadelphia, Pa., and was assistant district attorney for the county before he entered the service.

Postal Delivery Zones



TELL YOUR FRIENDS—Official designation of 20 numbered Washington postal delivery zones to be part of local mailing addresses was made yesterday by City Postmaster Vincent C. Lionel Atwill's Wife Sues for Divorce Here

Charging desertion and misconduct, Mrs. Louise Cromwell Atwill, Washington society figure and former wife of Gen. Douglas MacArthur, filed suit yesterday in District Court for an absolute divorce from Hollywood actor Lionel Atwill.

In the suit, Mrs. Atwill charged the actor with remaining away from home over night, associating with other women and threatening her with physical violence when he was under the influence of liquor. She also claimed he used abusive language to her and at times put her in great fear for her personal safety.

As a result of all this abuse, the complaint said, Mrs. Atwill's health has been impaired. She claims that Atfill required her to withdraw from their Pacific Palisades, Calif. home in April, 1939.

On her own volition, the suit claims, Mrs. Atwill returned to live with the actor in October, 1939, but in November of that year he told her he desired to live his own life and again asked that she leave him. She said she had lived in Washington since November, 1939.

The suit further states that since the two have been separated Mrs. Atwill has made several attempts to return to the actor and live with him any place he chose but that he had refused all of these overtures.

Mrs. Atwill also claims that the actor had never fully supported her although he was financially able to do so and that since 1939 he had only sent her small and infrequent remittances.

Besides the divorce Mrs. Atwill also requested the court to dissolve their joint property holdings. The suit did not request alimony.

Her marriage to Atwill at Eccleston, Md., was her third. Her first being to Walter Brooks, a Baltimore financier, and her second to General MacArthur, whom she married in Baltimore County, Md., in 1922 and divorced in Reno in 1929.

She is the daughter of Mrs. Edward Stotesbury, nationally known socialite of Philadelphia and Palm Beach, and the sister of Jimmy Cromwell, formerly Ambassador to Canada and husband of heiress Doris Duke.

Sentence Suspended

Gas Ration Case Yields Year, Fine

After pleading guilty to illegal transfer and possession of over 10,000 "S" and "C" gasoline ration coupons while a clerk with Ration Board 30, Samuel M. Sowder, 29, 3420 P Street Northwest, was sentenced yesterday by Justice Matthew F. McGuire in District Court to a suspended jail term of one year and fined $1000.

The prosecution of the case was handled by Assistant United States Attorney Bernard Margolius.

Lieut. Joseph Shimon, chief investigator of the United States Attorney's office, made the investigation which resulted in Sowder's arrest. Two indictments were returned against him containing 11 counts.

At the time of the arrest last January Shimon said that Sowder had taken the tickets from the ration board office and disposed of them through a number of sources one of which was a former resident of the District, who was arrested in Miami, la., just prior to Sowder's arrest and charged with illegal possession of over 500 coupons. He is reported to have told Miami police he had received tickets from Sowder by mail.

Ceiling Charges Against Grocer Ready for Action

The case of one grocery store that allegedly violated Office of Price Administration price ceilings has been prepared and submitted to the Department of Justice, and another is being completed for action, a District OPA spokesman told The Post yesterday.

2 Land Firms Convicted of Mail Fraud

New York, May 6 (A.P.).—Two land promotion companies and two of their officers, Frank H. Hibberd, jr., and Mrs. Louise H. C. Von Lenz Nields, both of Mount Rainier, Md., were convicted on charges of mail fraud, conspiracy and violations of the Securities Exchange Act by a Federal Court jury today.

Another defendant, Lawrence A. Weiner, a salesman, Jersey City, N. J., was acquitted by the jury, which contiued to deliberate on the charges against Drew P. Swanson, also a salesman of New York City.

A 15-count indictment charged that two corporations, the Kalamazoo Land Co., Inc., and the Independent Growing and Marketing Corp., their president, Hibberd, and secretary-treasurer Mrs. Nields, and the two salesmen with the sale of land in a 1500-acre tract in Volusia County, Fla., to investors at high prices and by means of fraudulent promises.

The verdicts were reached after the jury had deliberated more than 10 hours yesterday and today. Trial of the action started early in April.

Assistant United States Attorney Peter Donoghue, prosecutor of the case, estimated that investors lost a total of $225,000 through the purchase of the undeveloped undrained land. The Government charged that the defendants made representations that the property would be cleared, irrigated and made suitable for the growing of citrus fruit and vegetables.

Mother Asks Aid In Finding Girl; Vanished April 27

Mrs. Ella Foran of 1910 First Street Northwest, yesterday asked The Post to aid in locating her daughter, Margaret, 16, who disappeared on April 27.

MISS FORAN

Mrs. Foran said the girl had left home to go to work in a department store and has not been seen since. She did not report to the store, the mother said.

The girl is 5-feet 3-inches tall known to intimates as "Teeny."

Mrs. Foran enlisted the aid of police in finding her daughter on April 29 when she reported the disappearance.

Father Hyland Given Club Plaque At Catholic U.

The Rev. Ambrose R. Hyland, Catholic University graduate, 1924, who is chaplain of Clinton Prison in Dannemora, N. Y., returned to the university Wednesday night to receive the Glee Club plaque, awarded annually to outstanding Glee Club alumni.

The presentation was made at the school's annual spring concert, at which Glenn Carow, Washington pianist, was guest soloist. The concert was diretced by Dr. Leo A. Behrendt, under whom Father Hyland sang when he took social service courses at the school.

The award to Father Hyland was based principally on his work in building the famed Church of the Good Thief in the Clinton Prison yard with the aid of inmates.

Poems Convey Mothers' Day Inspiration in Capital Area

Like few American holidays, the annual celebration of Mother's Day brings forth latent poetic talent of surprising quality—and this year, when the day set aside for "her" on Sunday has more than ordinary significance, is no exception.

From Mrs. Edith Honig of Detroit, Mich., who left her Washington home six months ago, came these verses addressed to her mother, Mrs. Rebecca Krieger of 3532 A Street Southeast:

TO MY MOTHER

To the grandest mother a girl ever had—
Ready to stick by, be it good or bad;
Prepared to sacrifice; forgo all gain,
However the purpose might seem in vain.

To this wondrous being, I propose a toast,
And of health and happiness wish her a host.
May the deeds of her life be repaid in kind—
With contentment of soul, and peace of mind.

And from Yeoman Second Class Felix Bassett Grosso of the Bureau of Naval Personnel in Arlington came this poem dedicated to his own mother on the West Coast:

OUR NAVY MOTHER

In a home she calls her castle,
Lives a lady with silver tassel,
She gave her boy to help another,
A heart of gold for a Navy mother.

How she smiled on that first day
When her boy strolled down the way,
Confident and proud in his navy blue,
Of a mother so faithful and true.

She walks in her garden of roses,
Pondering as each precious minute closes,
How her boy crosses the waves,
Thankful and happy for those he saves.

She stands in the window at sunset
Waiting for her hero she'll ne'er forget.
The sands of time may cover his trail,
Yet his mother's love will never fail.

2 Cab Men Punished For Offenses

Refusal to Take Passenger Brings Heavier Penalty Than Impertinence

The Commissioners suspended the licenses of two more cab drivers yesterday. One was charged with refusing to take his fare to the designated address, the other with general impertinence and deliberately delivering his fare to the wrong address.

A driver who stopped for a passenger at Dupont Circle but refused to go any further when the fare asked to be taken to the Bellevue housing project had his hacker's license suspended for 15 days. The other driver, who delivered a woman to the Seventeenth Street entrance to the Red Cross headquarters when she asked to go to the Eighteenth Street building is to be kept off the streets for but five days.

The latter driver was reported to have followed the woman into the building threatening to have her arrested for thievery because she refused to pay her fare when he wouldn't take her to the door.

"Refusing to pick up a fare is one of the worst offenses a cab-driver can perform," Public Utilities Commission Chairman James H. Flanagan said.

Hack Inspector Joseph Harrington yesterday suggested to the Public Utilities Commission that one way of preventing arguments over group riding would be to have each passenger inquire his fare of the driver before entering the cab. Flanagan approved of the idea, but the new system of charging for group riding under consideration is supposed to eliminate such arguments anyway.

Last week the PUC suspended two drivers who refused to take a passenger downtown.

City News in Brief

The District of Columbia yesterday joined with 10 Eastern Seaboard States north of the Potomac in an agreement to mutually recognize automobile driving licenses issued in any of those States, and to issue driving permits to all qualified motorists holding such licenses.

The agreement, reached during the two-day Eastern conference of the American Association of Motor Vehicle Administrators, involves Maine, New Hampshire, Delaware, New York, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Connecticut, Massachusetts, Vermont and New Jersey. A spokesman for Virginia, which is not a member of the conference, said that his State was willing to join the agreement with any or all the individual States.

A recent WPB order requiring motorists to turn in their old license plates before receiving new ones was opposed in a resolution adopted by the conference.

D'Alesandro To Probe D.C. Tuberculosis

House Chairman Of Public Health Sets Hearing for Tuesday Morning

Representative D'Alesandro (Democrat) of Maryland, chairman of the public health subcommittee of the House District Committee, will hold hearings on the tuberculosis situation in the District Tuesday at 10 a. m., he announced yesterday.

D'Alesandro will open his investigation by calling Harald H. Lund, former executive secretary of the District Association, whose resignation a few weeks ago split the association in two and caused a "rump parliament" meeting which commended D'Alesandro's proposed inquiry.

Dr. J. Winthrop Peabody, president of the association, whom Lund has charged with running a "vest-pocket" organization also will be called.

Other Witnesses

Other slated to appear before the committee are: Dr. George C. Ruhland, District health officer, Dr. A. Barklie Coulter, in charge of tuberculosis work for the health department; Dr. Herman Hilleboe of the United States Public Health Service, Dr. Howard Payne of Freedmen's Hospital, Ray Everett, executive secretary of the Social Hygiene Society; Judge Nathan Margold of the Municipal Court, Dr. Paul Cornely of Howard University, Lt. Paul D. Guernsey, United States Army, former assistant secretary of the association; Paul D. Sleeper, who was director of last year's Christmas seal sale, and Edward Persons, chairman of a five-man committee appointed by the "rump parliament" to confer with the board of directors about holding a much-postponed annual meeting this month.

"Thorough Airing" Needed

D'Alesandro, announcing the date of his investigation, said:

"I want to avoid personalities and petty squabbles. I think the public will feel more confidence in the organization if convinced that all the facts have been given a thorough airing. We want to ascertain, and it is important we do learn, what is being done about tuberculosis in this city."

Meanwhile yesterday the executive committee of the District Branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People went on record as favoring the investigation by D'Alesandro into the tuberculosis situation here.

The association also favored cooperation with, but not subordination to, the Health Department and the District Medical Society, the holding of the postponed annual meeting at the earliest possible date, and liberalization of the by-laws of the association.

Nancy Murray Wins Prize For Oratory

Red-haired Nancy Lee Murray whose first appearance on the stage won storms of applause from the audience although her constituents from Baltimore had not yet arrived to lend support, last night won the eleventh annual archdiocesan oratorical contest held at Gonzaga High School before about 300 Catholic youths. She received a prize of $50 and the Archbishop Curley Trophy.

Contending against four other finalists, Miss Murray spoke on "The Part of the Catholic Youth of the United States in the Postwar Catholic Reconstruction." She urged Catholic youth to seek the light of right living in the postwar world, pointing out that in their hands they held two postwar worlds and it was theirs to make the choice.

Other contestants were Phyliss Brown, from Cumberland; Martin Middleton, Bryanton; Charlotte Richmond of this city and Harrington W. Smith, Westminster, Md.

Judging the contest were the Rev. Paul Taner, Representative Mary T. Norton (Democrat) of New Jersey, and Edward Curran, U. S. district attorney. John Jay Daly, of the Inter-American Commission, was chairman, and the Right Rev. Edward P. McAdams and the Right Rev. Louis C. Vaeth were presiding prelates. Music was provided by Gonzaga High School Band.

The contest was presented by the Catholic Students Mission Crusade under the sponsorship of the Catholic University Conference of Clerics and Religious.

The Michigan Republican said the precious motor fuel was taken sometime since last October. He valued it at $9.

If Civilized Behavior Were Hereditary, There Would Be No Need for Home and School Training Of Successive Generations, Says Former Teacher

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Everyone at the office today was holding forth on "P. H. D.'s" letter. Such snobbish assertions as his will be as fire to dry tinder to Americans who pride themselves on their democratic spirit. You will have far more letters of rebuttal than you can publish,—and all from people like myself, who thank God they do not have to know (or be neighbor to) P. H. D. As every child psychologist and educator can tell him, civilized behavior is not ready-made at birth; else there would be little need of schooling and training. What he believes is "good blood" coming out in his polite mannered offspring is only childish imitation (or reflection) of parental example,—and so on back through the whole 900 years of his family's "fine breeding."

Of P. H. D. himself, I am amazed that one so consciously well bred would use such terms as "brat," (about the neighbor's children) and "moron" (referring to the neighbors themselves). It smacks of Billingsgate, coming from an aristocratic spokesman. However, I shall not dwell on his contradictory utterances. There will be many to decry his self-righteous and offensive complacency. But in honesty, I must say that his criticism of American children is just and true. Often the most enlightened parents have the worst "brats."

For instance, the parents of a 4-year-old girl I knew were well known psychologists in Eastern academic circles. One day, in a pet, the girl refused to speak to her father. They allowed her to continue this for months. The last I saw of them, her silence had lasted nine months, and may have extended into years. Their theory was that they didn't want to thwart her. Incidentally, she once tried the same tactics on me. But as her teacher, I felt that I must give her the lesson the world would give her later,—of smoking her out of her silence by cheerful indifference. I brought all my resources of imagination to bear indirectly, and soon she was not only talking to me, but seemed to forget her resolution to "put me in Coventry."

Americans Seem Untamed, Compared to Other Races

To one who has traveled extensively in other countries, American children seem to be uncivilized barbarians; certainly a race of untamed extroverts. Children in other countries, where standards of education and living are far below ours, are noteworthy for a certain pleasing restraint of behavior which, if not "courtly," at least indicates conscientious parental supervision and discipline. Also, I have observed a gradual change for the worse in the behavior of this country's high school boys and girls during the past 10 to 15 years. For proof, ride on any Washington streetcar or bus and listen to the crude, uncouth, ungrammatical talk of the teen-agers. I am hoping, however, that Washington is worse than most cities in this respect; a sort of orphan child in American culture. I should hate to think that all America had sunk, in the last decade, to the "crude, loud-mouthed and even obscene behavior" among the young which P. H. D. reports, with stinging accuracy.

The one shining exception is the typical student in the Roman Catholic schools. And I can say this who am a Protestant and a former teacher. I advise parents whenever possible to send a child in the District to the Roman Catholic schools. My friends in England, though Protestants, are sending their daughters to the Sisters for higher education, where they are trained in refinement of behavior. It so happens that I am employed in a branch of the Government service where a high degree of literacy is a necessity; and with the draft, more and more youngsters are being taken on. All those coming to us from nearby Roman Catholic institutions can be singled out by their courtesy and air of fine breeding. On the other hand, one very nice young man began work for us recently. He came from one of the local high schools. When asked if he liked to read, he replied: "Oh, yes, indeed." When asked what type of books, he said, "Non-fiction, mostly." His interrogator was impressed. Did he mean history, science, etc? His reply was, literally,—"No. 'True stories!' "

God Help Stuffed-Shirt In Rough, Tough World

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I read your column as regularly as the earth rotates, because it comprises more of human interest and human life than anything else in print I know about. I study your column as much for enlightenment as for anything else,—rarely for entertainment. Yet the letter signed "P. H. D." in Monday's issue was entertainment pure and simple; and I very much wonder whether it was just a gag, or whether there can be an individual who is actually that much pleased with himself and ready to set it down in black and white.

This gentleman, so far removed from human frailty; this culminating flower of "900 years of fine breeding," who has been able to invest his small son at birth with so much poise and self-esteem that at 2½, Roderick knows exactly what to do in every pre-school social crisis,—this super-being does not belong in our confused democracy. Rather, he should be in some other land, superimposing his exalted will and culture on lesser spawn of the earth. However, my chief thought, on reading and re-reading his remarkable communication is this: If he has made a stuffed shirt out of Roderick thus early in life, then when the time comes for the lad to face a rough-and-tumble world, God help Roderick! Sincerely,

H. M.

Finds P. H. D.'s Line Remarkable in One Way

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: May I have a few lines of your space to answer one of the corniest letters I have ever read in your column? I am a low-bred parent, being a railroad worker; and I have only a small $5000 home. I have only a high school education, so if this letter isn't perfect, I am well bred enough to ask your pardon. I want to say that that fellow P. H. D. and his children are remarkable in one respect, anyway—to have lived so long without getting their blocks knocked off.

If either of my two low-bred brats should ever hit a girl,—regardless of her superior age or size,—I would make them rue the day. You see, I'm low-bred enough to try to raise my boys to respect girls and ladies, of all ages, at all times. And if either of my sons (both of whom have nicknames) should speak to a woman in the pert manner P. H. D.'s sprout used, he would have his mother and me to reckon with. I guess we're just that low-bred.

Points Out He's Picking On Women and Children

One thing I'm sure of: Mr. P. H. D. never told the neighbor lady to her face what he wrote about her in your column, because in that case, even if her husband was only a moron, Mr. P. H. D. would be fertilizing some 6-foot plot of earth by now. If you doubt that, Mr. P. H. D., try upstaging my wife with your snobbish blather and I guarantee your shade will be taking the next trip across the River Styx. Yep; I'm afraid I'm just that low bred. Of course I don't expect Mr. P. H. D. to pay any attention to comment from the likes of me; but I couldn't resist the urge to say what I think of a stinker who has the utter lack of decency to publicly cuss out practically the whole lot of American mothers and children. If he is a sample of the best that 900 years of "fine breeding" can produce, then I sincerely thank God that I am just plain

JOE AMERICA.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Your Baby and Mine

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

Mothers are never satisfied with the way their children act in public. They seem never to show off to the best advantage.

Either the child scorns the guests and won't give them even a glance, or else he or she wants to be the "whole cheese" and gallop in front of the strangers, capturing their eyes to the exclusion of all else.

Both parents and guests should ask themselves reasonably what can be expected of children. If honest, they will admit that they may be flustered in the presence of strangers and say and do things they deplore later in their calmer moments.

Take it for granted that a child, especially one newly conscious of himself as a person, isn't going to enjoy being looked at, questioned or made ot show off. If he is timid, he won't overcome his timidity because of the increased demands being made upon him to be a nice boy, or mannerly.

In fact, if forced to do so, he will exhibit his disagreeable personality aspects, as a matter of course. He'll want to be left alone and if he isn't he'll act up to his parent's dismay.

The natural born exhibitionist, who can't be happy unless someone is observing and admiring him, may be even harder for the parent or guests to bear. A little of that behavior goes a long way with everyone. A guest's smile gets pretty stiff when she is constantly prodded to, "Look at me," Mrs. Frank, "look what I'm doing."

All children, the timid as well as the aggressively smarty one, have to be shown ways in which to make themselves useful and pleasing instead of boresome.

Let the mother set out in advance the tasks to be expected of the children. There are so many ways in which even children can make guests comfortable and aware of their existence, without there being that unnatural, artificial effort to put themselves forward. With the child actively engaged in doing something, instead of only in efforts to be noticed, he will be content in short order to go his way having won the praise and admiration of a grateful guest.

Guests should make up their minds not to be critical of either show-off or timid children. Keep the child's social limitations in mind. As for the parent, she may as well be aware that no one outside of the family will ever thoroughly appreciate the cuteness or smartness of her children. With the expectations of both parties well within the bounds of possibility the guests won't be horrified or the parents humiliated by the child's natural behavior. They can both laugh it off with: "Well, what can one expect of children?"

The answer is: Nothing.

Our leaflet, "The Timid Child," may be had by sending a 3-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request to Myrtle Meyer Eldred in care of this newspaper.

Summer Swag

By Jeanne Contini

The jewelry you plan to wear with cottons should be born for it. That means it should be light, bright, and practically weightless. Heavy pins will bore holes through your favorite batiste and twist the warp of a linen. As to intrinsic value, well that's a matter of discretion. Before the war, one occasionally saw photos of "chic" women wearing diamonds with denims. For some reason this practice always impressed us as being in a class with owning a little mink coat to throw over your overalls . . . fabulous but phooey. In general, unless you're being very formal with gloves, veiling, etc., the summer is a fine time to indulge in imaginative and relatively inexpensive decoration.

New non-critical materials form perfect media for attractive lightweight costume jewelry; plastics, shells, ceramic, buttons, and fabric. We picked out a few frankly fake but flattering pieces that will give a fillup to your cottons without looking pretentious. For further information please call NAtional 4200, ext. 324 from 9 a. m.

FOR THE LAPEL OF YOUR SUMMER SUIT: A compact little posegay of starry red and white blossoms against a green wreath . . . Plastic and about $2.00.

PRETTY EARFUL: Starched white discs of crocheted lace with pearl button centers. Perfect with lace-trimmed gilets. About $1.00.

Two hearts in white ceramic to match the big one in the lower left-hand corner. About $6.00.

Feather-light flowers of pearly pink shell. About $1.00.

FOR THE NEW LOW NECKLINES: A necklace of sea-green shells strung on green suede thongs, looking as though they just came out of the ocean. About $1.00.

A choker of chalk-white beads interspersed with flower clusters. You can have flower earrings to match this.. About $4.00.

A multi-colored Victorian corsage of wax-dipped fabric flowers with the shine of porcelain. About $3.00 (left)

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn

A question on bidding, this one concerning a rebid, is presented by D. R. B. He writes: "How do I handle this fine heart suit? My complete hand:

♠ A 7 6
♡ A K Q J 9 7 3

"I open, of course, with one heart, next hand passes, and my partner's response is two diamonds. The second opponent also passes. Now what should I say? Should I try for a slam?"

With this type of hand our contributor's best call is four hearts. This bid shows a solid trump suit and is a mild slam invitation. Three hearts would imply weaker hearts and greater side strength, while five hearts would be an overbid.

By Malvina Lindsay

Mothers . . .

Who rise in meetings in which anything from the club minutes to proportionate representation is being discussed and begin their utterances, "Now, speaking as a mothah" . . .

Who go around telling other people that only a "mother's heart" can understand this or that current problem of life, and who patronize all women who are not mothers.

Who sit back with self-satisfaction and superiority when political demagogues launch into their perorations on motherhood.

Whose vocabulary is bounded on the north by "You ought," on the south by "Don't," on the west by "No" and on the east by "Mother knows best."

Who go around saying of their grown sons and daughters "He (or she) is still my baby," and who treat them accordingly.

Who are virtually moved to tears by any reference to "home and mother," especially in popular songs, and who cannot refer to another mother without calling her "a poor little mother" or a "dear little mother."

Who disseminate the idea that they deliberately became mothers as gestures of altruistic service to the world and not for their own satisfaction and self-expression.

Who quote moral maxims and sentimental poetry, who are always talking about "right" and "duty;" who wear long-suffering, martyr-like expressions on their faces; who wonder if anyone appreciates all that they do.

Who cultivate dowdiness and a hang-dog appearance so that their children can "have things," and then wonder why their children are ashamed of them in public.

Who love their children "better than anything else in the world," but do not love them enough to respect their dignity as individuals and to foster and guide their liberty of spirit, which is the birthright even of the young in a democracy.

Who are always reminding themselves and everybody else of what they have done for their children.

Who think that the biologic feat of bearing a child makes them in itself "mothers," and who capitalize on it to the end of their days, becoming the professional mothers of the world and the vehicles for debasing noble sentiment into cheap sentimentality.

. . . and Mothers

Who take the chicken wing (ostensibly by choice) when there is company and think nothing of it—but who have sense enough occasionally to grab off a good piece of the breast in order to save themselves from becoming martyrs.

Who strike a nice balance between intruding themselves into their children's lives as "chums," and of acting toward them as omniscient Olympian dictators.

Who have a sense of humor (without telling people that it is all that sustains them) and who can laugh at a great many things in life, including themselves.

Who make their children feel proud of them by their dress, their alertness and their trustworthiness, even if it means a few less luxuries for the children.

Who can express warmth, gentleness, kindness, understanding and "motherliness," with simplicity, dignity and restraint, and without indulging in scenes.

Who, no matter how great the trial, hide their tears and their fears from their children, and always symbolize to them rocks of strength and security.

Whose families in dark moments think of them with cheer and confidence and with the eternal faith "Mother can fix it."

Who, when the time comes for their fledglings to leave the nest, loose them and let them go cheerfully and without sighs, tears or dour faces, and who then set about vigorously building themselves busy, useful and expansive lives in other directions.

Who ask no quarter, no pity, no special privileges of anyone because they are mothers, but who go gallantly with heads high, standing on their own feet, and who advance into old age with their children loving them for what they are as human beings rather than from a sense of obligation for their sacrifices.

Who take advantage of that divine privilege possessed by no other species than the human of growing in grace and beauty as the years pass, and who become finally those most magnificent of all beings, wise, prescient and lovely "old ladies" who some way seem to be tenuous links between this world and the next.

One Summer's Romance

—BY RITA HANSEN—

CHAPTER V

"You said they were terrible, and you were probably right." With composure she picked the tray up again and placed it across his knees. "I want you to eat every bit of your breakfast and drink your coffee. I went to the trouble of fixing it for you and I'm not going to see it wasted!"

She wasn't sure later if she slammed the door or not, but she rather imagined she had. She thought she was terribly angry, but when she got downstairs she was laughing in breathless gasps. He'd looked so helpless and outraged, making grabs at the sliding tray on his knees and scowling fiercely. But he was an idiot and deserved to be told about it . . . though Lisa, in her guise of housekeeper, was hardly the person to do it.

That afternoon when she was sitting on her heels in the garden, weeding her flower beds, he came up behind her and stood silently. She felt him there and turned around, squinting up at him against the sun. He was grinning with that amiable, half-pathetic quirk in his mouth. "Am I forgiven, Miss Alden?"

She shrugged her shoulders and went back to her weeding. "I'm sorry if I lost my temper, Mr. Bradford. It was rather silly."

"You've got me scared through, honestly. You remind me of my great aunt, the one who lives in Peoria." He poked his foot at a clod of dirt, breaking it carefully around the base of a plant. "She never liked me either. She was always triumphant because she said I'd never amount to anything and I proved she was right by becoming a writer."

Lisa laughed and after a few moments he walked away. She caught herself smiling at nothing in particular several times that morning and after that she and Bradford seemed much better friends. He began reading parts of his play to her, asking for her honest opinion. This was flattering but difficult, because he was able to tell what she really thought so that although she might insist valiantly that she thought a scene was very nice—if he saw in her face that she didn't like it, he made her admit it.

One morning, after he finished reading a few pages of script, he suddenly threw them to the floor and said "What's the matter with it, Lisa? Why isn't it any good?"

"Oh, it is good! It's written very well . . ."

He silenced her with a gesture. "Nuts. You don't like it any better than I do. You've got to tell me why."

"I don't know why." She moved uneasily in her chair. "It's so beautiful, it's almost like poetry . . ."

"I don't care about the words. Does it mean anything to you?"

"No," she said, surprising herself with the flatness of her answer. "No, it's lovely to listen to, but I don't understand lots of it. It isn't real to me . . . but then I don't know anything about plays . . ."

"You," he said, "may know more than you think. You've hit one point; it isn't real, nothing I write is. Nothing in my life has ever seemed very real to me; that's why I write that way, I guess."

"Why do you write if it makes you unhappy, Mr. Bradford?"

He shrugged. "Happiness is a silly word. I want to give the world beauty if I can. I've been called an escape author, and not in a complimentary sense, but that's what I want to be. Life isn't pretty . . . if you keep holding it up in front of people all the time. And writing is an escape for me, too. The only one I've found so far.' He left her, suddenly, as he always did, and she didn't see him the rest of the day.

However, the next afternoon, when she thought he was busy in his study, he came in shouting her name buoyantly, "Lisa. I looked at a calendar for the first time in a week and according to my calculations, it's Saturday afternoon."

"Of course," she said. "Does that mean anything?"

"Mean anything?" he looked at her in amazement. "My dear child, nobody works on Saturday afternoon! Six and a half days and nights I'll work if need be, but not Saturday afternoon! I want to go on a picnic!"

He seemed completely changed from his mood of the day before. She said, "I'll pack you a lunch, if you life."

"Where's Effie?" he asked, looking around. "Let's all go."

"Effie went down to the doctor in Willow Fork with Slade."

"Then you go, Lisa," he pleaded. "I can't go on a picnic alone!"

She thought longingly of the cool long shadows under the trees on the bank of Feather River. She hadn't been on even one hike all spring. "I should stay home," she demurred with no conviction, "but I'd love to go!"

They climbed over the low hills, up near the source of the river where it twisted through whirlpools of shady water and the grass was spotted with hot sun and black leaf patterns. Johnny lay on his back and watched the slow-moving puffs of white clouds, while Lisa spread the red table cloth, and set out the thermos bottle and sandwiches.

They ate everything there was, and after the coffee was gone they craned their necks out over the edge of the rocks and drank from the river in gulps while the cold spray dashed their faces.

"I feel like a pagan," he sighed at last. "With some olive leaves in my hand, I might even frolic up and down hill and dale. Though I doubt it. It's too comfortable just sitting here."

Very naturally he dropped his head into her lap, so naturally that she couldn't protest, though she was embarrassed with the feeling of his sun-warmed hair against her arm. "You don't act like a playwright today," she said down to him.

He put his finger to his lips. "Shh, I'm not today. I'm running as far away as I can. Let's not even think about it."

There was a sleepy murmur all about them, a medley of summer noises that made a silence after awhile, and the sun's long rays were gentle. She told him a little about herself, about her love for the valley, and he said, "It must be nice to belong to a place in the world, and be sure of it. I never belonged anywhere. I even wonder sometimes if somebody got their signals mixed and I belonged to some other time or some other world. It's very lonely . . . not even having a world of your own!"

"Mr. Bradford," she protested, "it's not that bad, is it?"

"No," he admitted with a nice candor. "I'm just being too dramatic, as usual. I'm feeling sorry for myself and asking for sympathy. That's a dirty trick."

"Well, I've always heard you had to be unhappy to be a great artist of any kind," Lisa said seriously, and watched him break into a slow laugh.

Women's Club News

By Genevieve Reynolds

Still another defense dilemma confronts Mrs. America. Is it better to send children into foster homes and let mothers produce arms for the Nation or try to keep children at home, thereby limiting industrial "manpower?" Perhaps the problem wouldn't be so difficult if there were enough foster homes.

GENEVIEVE REYNOLDS

But as Dorothy Hutchinson, assistant professor of social work at the New York School of Social Work, Columbia University, points out in her new book, "In Quest of Foster Parents," a rising demand by parents in defense areas for placement of their children and a growing shortage of foster homes has created a major problem for child placing agencies.

"Abrupt changes are taking place in all families. Fathers and foster fathers are leaving home for military service," explained Miss Hutchinson. Mothers with reduced incomes are seeking work, and many children are being left without real care. In addition, certain parents who have hung together for reasons of convention now have a self-justification for placing their children in foster homes.

"Furthermore, the opportunity to make higher wages in defense factories is irresistible to many parents. Also, good women who in ordinary times might well be interested in boarding children now submerge this interest to rent rooms to defense workers who can pay more than the child placing agencies. Thus child placing agencies are faced with fewer resources in terms of foster homes and at the same time a correspondingly greater need for them.'

The writer reminds her readers of the importance in time of war of holding fast to the now tried conviction that children, especially preschool children, should be kept with their mothers. When mothers must work, Miss Hutchinson suggests as an alternative foster day care, the day nursery, housekeeper service and after-school programs.

Warning that evacuation of mothers and children may become a necessity in seaboard States, the author urged that long-range planning begin immediately so as to avoid panic, inefficiency and confusion for both children and parents.

Pierce Guild's May Party

If you have a yen for delectable homemade cakes and cookies, then hie yourself to the annual May party given by the Ladies of the Pierce Guild for the benefit of the Washington Home for Foundlings this afternoon at the home, 4610 Forty-second Street Northwest. Not only will you find mouth-watering sweets for sale but bags and fancy articles.

As for entertainment, there will be cards from 2 to 4 followed by a tea. Also, you will have an opportunity to see the new modern infants ward, which was added recently by a $10,000 bequest from Mrs. Laura Lisner.

A traditional event of the home, this party is one place you will find old Washingtonians or the Cave Dwellers. Originally the institution was founded to provide for "doorstep babies," but since there are few if any now, the home cares for the babies of parents too sick to look after their own. Since the war, numerous requests have poured in from working mothers to leave their children for day care. For the present, however, the home will continue its services to children of sick parents.

Guests will be received by the president, Mrs. William H. Sholes, and Mrs. Cloyd Heck Marvin, past president.

Gray Hair an Asset, Not Liability

By Martha Ellyn

Next Sunday mothers will be remembered with some heart-warming gifts of sentiment. Not all mothers are alike however. Tippets and antimacassars would not be suitable for all—but there are many tokens—flowers, telegrams, kerchiefs, handbags, jewelry and toiletries—to send or give mothers in recognition of "her day."

This should be a day when mother sits back and relaxes while you admire her and evaluate her splendid qualities. She has for years no doubt seen to it that her girl had ruffles on graduation dress, frills on Easter togs and slick hair-do at a favorite beauty salon for gala occasions. Mothers also have a way of seeing that sons have their favorite dishes, money with which to buy sport's equipment and a host of other things which make young life more gay.

A gift that most mothers would appreciate is a top to toe beauty treatment. Many beauty salons have available gift certificates which can be given mother to be used as needed. That is one way of making a gift have elasticity.

Mothers blessed with gray hair have an asset instead of a liability. But silver, white or gray hair needs to be becomingly dressed. It needs proper care too. The arrangement need not be elaborate for a simple, neat and soft-looking coiffure will bring out the beauty of white or gray hair. Hair stylists can advise as to the best hair arrangement.

There is just as great beauty in the highlights of silvery locks as that of chestnut, brown, auburn or golden hair. But the highlights won't come shining through unless it is kept glistening and healthy by daily brushings, and, if needed, a weekly massage. Oil treatments, too, do a world of good for graying hair.

Muddy looking or streaked white or gray hair is the result of an unbalancing of the hairs. A reliable rinse or oil shampoo tint will easily and quickly give new balance and highlights to such hair. A rinse is only a temporary coloring of the hair, and should not be confused with a dye. Rinses will wash out readily with the next shampoo. A reliable rinse does more than give good tone to the hair, for it also acts as a softening agent. It helps to eliminate any soap residue from each and every strand of hair. These reliable rinses also keep white hair in good condition for permament waves.

The soft light blue rinse that many women use so successfully can be purchased at beauty salons for home use. A soft bluish tinge gives a lift to the complexion and brightens eyes. The oil shampoo tint has been so perfected that it cleanses, conditions and tints the hair at the same time. The beauty salon operator watches every minute for color reaction. She tests a strand of hair, notes the exact time and then ends the application to the exact moment of the test. This, of course, can be done by home treatment, too.

Mrs. Irene Caldwell (left) chooses the casual short hair-do for her lovely white hair. This style is not only extremely becoming to Mrs. Caldwell, but is also easy to care for and arrange Mrs. Richard Kleberg, wife of Representative Kleberg of Tex., proves that gray hair can be beautifully and smartly coiffed with her dignified upswept coiffure, as shown above

World Quinine Supply Ample to Fight Malaria

By Logan Clendening, M.D.

Malaria is still the great world-wide killer. This may seem strange to those of my readers who live in the middle and northern part of North America, but in our Southern States and in nearly every part of the world where our boys are fighting, it is rampant and far from a minor malady.

Quinine is still, also, the sovereign remedy for malaria, reports to the contrary about atabrine notwithstanding.

Before Pearl Harbor the Dutch on the island of Java controlled the world supply of quinine. Fears have been expressed that since the Japanese conquest of Java our supply of quinine is in danger of running out and our troops in tropical and semitropical countries will suffer the pangs of malaria without a cure.

These fears are without foundation. In the first place there is an enormous supply of quinine in storage for the armed forces, also an adequate supply for the civil population of the United States for several years.

Various companies have begun the cultivation of cinchona trees, from the bark of which quinine is derived, in Bolivia and Guatemala. South and Central America was the original home of the cinchona tree. The tree takes 15 years to mature to the place where the bark is productive of quinine, and these Guatemalan trees will begin to bear about six years hence.

Quinine has also been cultivated in India. The product is known as totaquinine (tota, because it contains all the alkaloids), and while the Indian product is not nearly as good as the Java product, it will serve, and requires only a higher dosage to make it effective.

Then the Russians have begun cultivating Indian cinchona plants in the Caucasus.

The fear that the Japanese, in a fit of destructiveness in the event of being forced to abandon Java, will burn the quinine forests is also unwarranted. There is nearly continuous rain in that region: to burn them would be impossible. And since there are 50,000 acres or more of these forests, to cut them down is equally impossible in any short time.

The Dutch botanists have developed one of the most highly specialized agricultural projects on earth in their cinchona plantations. They have bred and cultivated their trees so that they get 8 to 10 per cent quinine out of the bark, whereas the British in India get only 2 per cent and the Central American bark yields even less.

This farming takes long-range planning. The crop matures only once in 15 years, and after the tree is stripped it is afterwards useless. So every year one forest must be destroyed and a new one planted. The seeds of the cinchona tree are so small that it takes about 40,000 to make a gram. The Dutch have taught Javanese girls to distinguish the seeds with embryos. They sit at a table, the top of which is ground glass, illuminated from below, and brush the little seeds into a pile with a feather, separating them from the useless ones.

John Harvey Plans Mother's Day Menu He Will Prepare

Bread cast upon the waters is returning to Mrs. John Harvey in culinary form this Mother's Day. Mrs. Harvey is an excellent cook. She is also very generous with her talents, for she is always knocking at some neighbor's door in the Dorchester House, with a chocolate cake, steaming vegetable soup or some other favorite dish of her friends, as an offering. Her family or friends need only say they like a certain dish and it appears in Aladdin-like time.

In spite of the fact that John Wesley Harvey, her son, is a strapping six-footer, he has inherited —or at least assimilated —a flare for fine cookery. Realizing that it takes time and effort to achieve a good meal, John decided to give his mother a "furlough" from preparing dinner on Mother's Day.

When I heard him questioning his mother several days ago as to what dishes she would especially like for her Sunday dinner, I was impressed with the skill with which he turned the tables on his mother in meal-planning.

"But what would you especially like to eat, mother?" John asked. She replied in true mother fashion that she would enjoy anything he wanted to prepare. But her son persisted, and she named a number of her favorite foods and told him to take his choice.

Later, when I asked John what he decided to use on his menu, he told me his line-up. He showed he knows his "onions," not only in his selection of food, but in meeting the handicap of rationing. Meat coupons, potato scarcity, sugar limtiations and dishes not too involved, all these had to be considered. So here's what he decided upon from the foods his mother had included —chicken, carrots, calavos and strawberries among her preferences.

Dinner Menu

Chilled Vegetable Juice
Ripe Olives Radishes
Roasted Chicken Fresh Peas
Carrot Souffle
Calavo-Grapefruit Salad
Butter Gems Butter
Strawberry Dessert Waffles
Coffee

As you analyze this menu you will note that very few rationed foods are considered. The vegetable juice may be either canned or made from fresh vegetables. Butter and coffee are of the rationed foods. The dessert waffles will be made from ready-mix waffle product. And the whipped cream for topping this dessert will be made from coffee cream by the addition of gelatin.

The recipe for the carrot souffle and whipping the cream follows:

Carrot Souffle

Brown 2 tablespoons chopped onion in 4 tablespoons butter in a one-quart heat-resistant glass saucepan. Blend in 3 tablespoons flour; add ½ cup milk gradually, stirring constantly. Cook about 3 to 5 minutes or until no starchy taste remains. Separate 5 eggs; add the beaten egg yolks, 1 cup chopped cooked carrots, ⅛ teaspoon nutmeg and ½ teaspoon salt to the flour mixture. Beat egg whites to the soft peak stage; fold into flour mixture. Pour into a 1½-quart ungreased heat-resistant glass baking dish. Bake in a moderately slow oven, 325 degrees, about one hour, or until golden brown. Amount, 6 servings.

Either fresh cream or evaporated milk may be whipped. The following recipes give splendid results if the directions are followed carefully.

Whipped Cream

Pour 2 tablespoons cold milk in bowl and sprinkle ¾ teaspoonsful sparkling gelatin on top of milk. Stir thoroughly. Place bowl over boiling water and stir until gelatin is dissolved. Cool, Whip 1 cup cream and gradually add dissolved gelatin. Beat until stiff and add ½ cup powdered sugar, ¼ teaspoonful salt and 1 tea spoon vanilla.

Whipped Evaporated Milk

Pour 1 cup evaporated milk in top part of double boiler and heat with the lid off until hot. Pour 2 teaspoonfuls cold water in bowl and sprinkle ½ teaspoon sparkling gelatin on top of water. Add to hot milk and stir until Gelatine is dissolved. Now pour into a shallow bowl and chill until icy cold. Then whip vigorously until stiff. Makes 2 cups whipped cream. If used as a topping, sweeten and flavor. Add salt if desired.

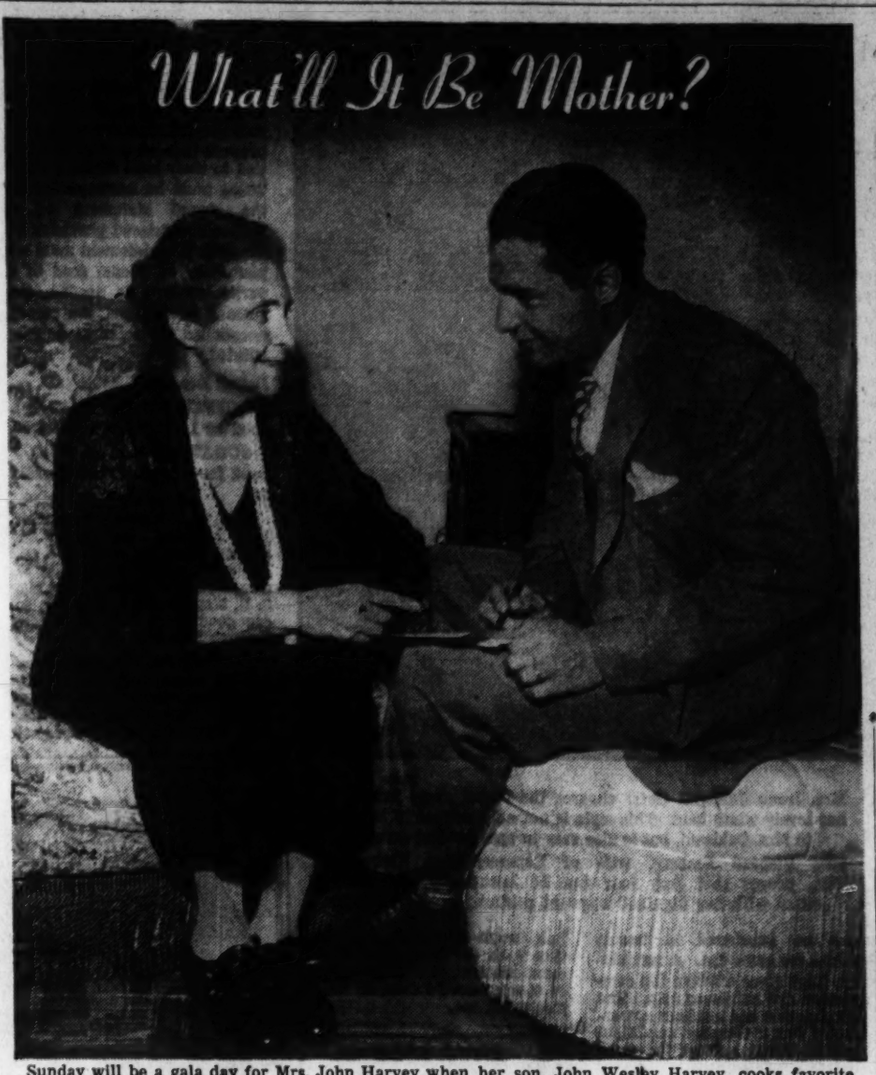
Apple Tapioca Cream Contains Good Flavor

If you like a dessert apple-flavored, you will find one made combining apples and tapioca much to your taste. It is nutritious for it contains in addition to the apples and tapioca, milk, lemon juice and eggs. That's a combination that makes for excellent nutrition. Here is a recipe for making it.

APPLE TAPIOCA CREAM PUDDING

Place 3 tart apples, pared and thinly sliced, in greased baking dish; sprinkle with 3 tablespoons sugar, 1 tablespoon melted butter, 1 tablespoon lemon juice and 3 tablespoons boiling water. Cover and bake in moderate oven, 375 F. for 30 minutes. Mix one egg yolk with small amount of 3 cups milk, in top of double boiler. Add remaining milk, 2½ tablespoons quick-cooking tapioca, 4 tablespoons sugar and ⅛ teaspoon salt. Place over rapidly boiling water and cook 8 to 10 minutes after water boils again, stirring frequently. Beat egg white until just stiff enough to hold shape. Fold hot tapioca mixture gradually into egg white. Add ½ teaspoon vanilla. Turn out over hot apples and continue baking, uncovered, 15 minutes. Serve hot or cold with fruit sauce or cream. Serves six.



Sunday will be a gala day for Mrs. John Harvey when her son, John Wesley Harvey, cooks favorite foods for her. This will be John's tribute to his mother in recognition of Mother's Day. The meal he has planned takes into consideration not only his mother's preferences but also the availability of foods. Very few rationed foods are necessary in preparing the menu he will prepare

Loaf of Bread Plus Filling Makes Guest Fare

Here's a suggestion for those evenings at home when friends are coming and you feel the urge to serve a bit of food. Begin with an unsliced loaf of bread of sandwich size. Softened margarine makes a good spread at less point cost than butter. But you can use mayonnaise instead of either and find it much easier to spread.

Sandwich fillings that are original—at least one or two of them—always make a sandwich loaf more interesting. Sliced or mashed Calavo is new in this form, to many people and makes a satisfying sandwich filling. Season with salt, lemon juice, onion juice or salt and tabasco sauce. When tomatoes are in season, use a layer of thin sliced tomatoes for good contrast. Make one filling of chopped ripe olives, minced parsley and mayonnaise. Another filling might be egg salad, with or without a chewy bit of celery included. If you've left-over meat that you can afford to use that way, substitute it for chicken.

The cream cheese frosting for the loaf is usually moistened with light cream and seasoned with Onion juice and tabasco sauce But you can give it special flavor and attractive spring color by using a proportion of one cup of sieved Calavo to each three-ounce package of cream cheese. Season the mixture with lemon juice, onion salt, tabasco sauce and salt to taste. These proportions cover a 16-ounce loaf —12 servings—lightly, For a heavier frosting double both cream cheese and Calavo proportions. Chill the loaf well before serving.

Individual Pies Require Little Meat

Carrots combined with beef chuck or rump steak, topped with crisp biscuit dough can be put together in record time to make an appealing main dish. Here is the recipe for making the pies:

INDIVIDUAL MEAT AND CARROT PIES

Wipe 1 pound of beef chuck or rump steak cut in cubes. Dredge in 2 tablespoons flour and brown in hot fat. Cover with 1½ cups hot water and add ½ teaspoon salt and ½ teaspoon pepper. Cook one hour or until tender, Drain liquid. For each cup liquid add 2 tablespoons flour with 2 tablespoons cold water until a smooth paste is formed. Add to meat juices. Cook until slightly thickened. Add water, stirring until a smooth gravy is made. Add 1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce, if desired. Arrange meat and one bunch of carrots, cut into strips, in 6 individual casseroles. Add gravy. Roll biscuit dough to ¼ inch thickness. Cut circles large enough to cover casseroles. Cut a small circle from center. Place on top of meat mixture. Bake in a hot oven, 450 F., 20 minutes.

Latest Sensational Investigation of Purposeful Partying In Capital Throws New Light on a Time-Worn Utility; Old-Timers Take It in Stride; No New Story to Them

While newcomers to Washington gasp at each fresh rumor swirling around "the big red house on R Street," old-timers sit back calmly and take the whole sensational story in their stride. Their so-what attitude indicates in effect that they know this sort of thing has happened before; it will happen again. Fact is, it goes on all the time.

As much a part of the Capital picture as the Washington Monument, the Lincoln Memorial and the Pan American Union is Our Town's type of purposeful party-giving that promotes causes, contracts and personal or political advancement. Little dinners for big men, where the ambitious manage to get on a first-name bus with Nation's leaders somewhere between soup and dessert, have long made this widely publicized "Washington society business" just that . . . with emphasis on the business.

Super Service on the Party Line

Providing superservice — whereby climbing is negotiated with a minimum amount of effort—at least half the parties in Washington are planned around useful personalities, whose names lure other guests. Sometimes the "lure" fails to appear, but an acceptable explanation can always be hatched up at the last minute . . . and by that time enough other "names" have been hauled in to make the party worth attending.

Invitations, tossed off in casual tones, invariably follow a time-worn line of patter. "I'm having a few friends in to dinner next Tuesday . . . for Senator Puffem. Can't you join us?" or "Have you met Baroness Wheedlemint? She's too, too charming. By the way, she's stopping in for a cocktail on Friday. It's not a party—just a few friends. Why don't you come in?"

No matter how well he knows his social ropes, and no matter how snobbish he would like to be, the average Washingtonian will go anywhere he's asked—provided, of course, he hasn't another engagement. Sometimes, even then. A popular presidential secretary, for example, has been known to accept invitations to as many as three dinners in one evening. Cleverly, he managed to drop by early for one; mid-evening for another; and late, for the last. ("Sorry, so sorry; it was either this way, or I couldn't come at all," was something like what he was said to have said about it; but the hostesses didn't seem to mind. After all, they explained, he was a busy man, times being what they are and so on.)

Way to a Better Mouse Trap

It should go without saying that few persons here are afflicted with claustrophobia. Most of them move in droves and love it. In numerous cases, the matter of who is giving the party is scarcely considered . . . beyond the time when correct name and address are put into the datebook. Point of the whole thing is that somehow the impression has got about that in Washington, as nowhere else in the world, the people you meet at anybody's party—ups and downs of bureaucratic big-shooting being what they are—may be your road to a better mouse trap.

All of which is by way of saying that, come Congressional investigations and exposures as they may, there will always be plenty of parties in Washington . . . and big and little shots will continue to turn up by the dozens, even when they don't know the host and hostess by all the names that may come to light later.

No matter how this latest "society" case-history turns out, however, it won't have much effect on the party-giving and party-attending that accents the Capital calendar. The social implications are very slight; but a utility that has seen service as long as there has been a Washington won't be discarded at this late date. And big and little shots will, in most instances, continue to go where they are invited . . . even when they wouldn't know the hostess if they met her on the street two hours before time for the party.

Perhaps the most regretable phase of the whole thing is that America-outside-Washington will not understand; will be enraged all over again at this latest example of Capital fiddling while the world burns. To put it bluntly, once more that fabulous quantity known far and wide as "Washington society" will have another black mark against it, even though there is actually no connection at all.

Mrs. Williams, Senor Danis To Be Wed

A cable from Foreign Minister Jordana in Madrid which was received here on Monday brought good news for Mrs. Irene Gough Kingston Williams of England and Mexico and Eduardo Danis, Minister-Attache of the Spanish Embassy. It was the announcement that permission had been granted by the Spanish government for their wedding to take place.

Spain, like other countries, has ruled that their citizens in foreign service may not marry persons of other nationalities, except by special permission. So—now Mrs. Williams is hurriedly making arrangements for the ceremony which will take place next Wednesday.

The wedding will be held in St. Thomas the Apostle Church and a reception will follow at Wardman Park Hotel, where the bride-to-be makes her home. The Spanish Ambassador and Senora de Cardenas will entertain at luncheon today in honor of Mrs. Williams and Senor Danis, and tomorrow Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Burke will give a luncheon for the prospective bride and bridegroom.

The bride-to-be has lived in Washington for almost three years. She was educated in Lausanne, Switzerland, studied in Germany and attended the Sorbonne. Mr. Danis was once head of the press in Spain, was Consul General in Dresden, Germany, and was a member of the Spanish Embassy staff in Berlin and London.

Harry Schmidt—

Joined Marines and Saw World From China to Cuba

This is another in a series of stories about the men who are running the war. The next will appear on Monday.

By Patricia Grady

Harris & Ewing
GENERAL SCHMIDT

Bluff, tough and kindly, the Marine Corps' No. 2 general has a Leatherneck's fierce pride in his outfit.

Maj. Gen. Harry Schmidt answers to the title of Assistant to the Commandant of the Marine Corps. This ruddy-faced, plain-as-an-old-shoe officer is the man who takes over the Devil Dog reins when Lieut. Gen. Thomas Holcomb is away. It's his job to lift many of the administrative burdens from his commandant's shoulders.

A real travelin' marine, General Schmidt's carer record reads like a Cook's Tour of the Pacific—Guam, the Philippines, Hawaii, four tours in China, and, just for good measure, Cuba and Nicaragua. As Chief of Staff of the Second Marine Brigade, this white-haired, dark-eyebrowed general served in Shanghai in 1937. No second-guesser, he admits only that "we all were conscious of the tension and hostility."

Just back from a tour of his services's training camps, General Schmidt is pleased by what he saw. "The Marine Corps famous esprit is the result of deliberate indoctrination," he explains. "In training, the men are taught the glorious history of the corps and what is expected of them to live up to it. We have a lot to be proud of.

Outlook Optimistic

"The draftees are working out very well," he continues candidly. "Of course, to date we have all been getting the cream of the selectees. As we get further down the line, we can't expect the caliber to be of its present high grade."

Square-built and sturdy, General Schmidt has an earthy quality, a realistic mind. "Your guess is as good as mine," is his answer to a "duration" question. After a "bad year in 1942," the general finds the war outlook "much better now." He's quite optimistic, but don't count on having your boys home for Christmas on General Schmidt's say-so.

The general's life is organized around an early-to-bed-and-to-rise regime. His alarm clock rings about 6 and he checks into his office by 8. Though he's on 24-hour call, he doesn't believe in midnight-oil burning or the seven-day week.

All-Out Marine Family

His hobby, if any, is fishing and on his latest inspection trip he managed to sneak away for a few rod and line sessions. In the prewar days, he and his son, Richard, used to devote one month a year to a fishing orgy. Richard is now a major in the Marine Corps, stationed at San Diego.

The general confesses that he plays a "poor game of golf" and that he gave up tennis when his son could beat him. He likes to read—particularly biographies—but he does so much reading at his desk that the printed word now holds little after-office-hours appeal.

General and Mrs. Schmidt live at the Marine Barracks. Mrs. Schmidt has a number of service and charity interests, including a regular bandage-rolling stint. Their daughter is the wife of Maj. W. R. Wendt of the Marine Corps, making the Schmidt's Marine family roster complete.

A native of Holdredge, Nebr., General Schmidt was appointed a second lieutenant in 1909. Since his entry in the corps he has served at numerous foreign posts, at sea aboard the Oklahoma, Montana and Tennessee, and at various stations in this country.

Wears Navy Cross

Among his domestic posts are the Marine Corps Schools, where he was an instructor; the Department of the Pacific, as assistant chief of staff of the commanding general, and Paymaster Department Headquarters in Washington as executive officer. He is a graduate of the Field Officers' Course, Marine Corps Schools, and of the Army Command and General Staff School at Fort Leavenworth, Kans. He took over his present job in February of last year.

For distinguished service as Brigade Intelligence Officer in Nicaragua from 1928 to 1929, General Schmidt was awarded the Navy Cross. The President of Nicaragua bestowed on him the Nicaraguan Medal of Distinction and Diploma and the Nicaraguan Medal of Merit with Silver Star. In addition he holds the Expeditionary Medal with two bronze stars, the Mexican Service Medal, the Victory Medal, the Yangtse Service Medal, the Second Nicaraguan Campaign Medal and the American Defense Service Medal.

J. C. Bradleys Recently Wed, On Honeymoon

Mr. and Mrs. John Curtis Bradley, who were married on Saturday, May 1, left after the wedding reception for their honeymoon. The bride before her marriage was Miss Harriet Ann Fisher, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Wellen Fisher of Chevy Chase, Md. Mr. Bradley is the son of Mrs. John Curtis Bradley of New York and Washington. Dr. Frederick Brown Harris officiated at the ceremony held in the Foundry Methodist Church at 7:30 o'clock.

Mr. Fisher gave his daughter in marriage. She wore a white marquisette and lace gown with a Brittany lace cap trimmed with orange blossoms. She carried a cascade bouquet of white roses and sweet peas with a shower of white hyacinths. Miss Jean Fisher, who was maid of honor for her sister, wore a white mousseline de soie gown and carried a bouquet of mixed spring flowers.

Lieut. John E. Shekell of Washington was best man, and the ushers were Eldon E. Sweezy of Washington and Elmo J. Ceconi of Arlington, Va.

The bride is a graduate of Northfield Seminary and attended Goucher College and George Washington University. Mr. Bradley is a student at George Washington University Law School and is a member of Phi Sigma Kappa and Gate and Key honorary society.

Josephine James Is Bride-Elect

Mr. and Mrs. Fleet H. James of Purcellville, Va., announce the engagement of their daughter, Josephine Leslie, to Maynard H. Waterfield, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. John E. Waterfield of Sandusky, Ohio.

Mr. Waterfield is now employed in Washington on the secretarial staff of Senator Harold H. Burton of Ohio. The wedding will take place here in the early summer.

Daisies, Not Tulips, to Be Offered At Netherlands Exhibit Opening

Four small children in Holland garb will offer a flower to each of the guests attending the opening of the Netherlands exhibit at the United War Relief Center today from 4 to 6 p. m.

Not the traditional tulip, but a simple field flower—the daisy—will be featured in connection with the Netherlands exhibit, as sponsored by the Queen Wilhelmina Fund here.

For the daisy, according to the Netherlanders here, is now worn by their people as a tribute to their war heroes and to their martyred dead. The white-petaled blossom with the heart of orange has become in this little occupied country a symbol of loyalty to the House of Orange.

Children who will distribute flowers at the exhibit opening today include Jetty Loudon, 4½-year-old daughter of the Netherland's Ambassador; 5-year-old Elizabeth Boon, daughter of the Second Secretary, and the two sons of the Netherland's Counselor, Pieter, 3, and Dirk-Jan van Houten, 6.

There is, of course, a connection between the popularity of the daisy and the name which Princess Juliana bestowed upon her third child—Princess Margriet Francisca, born in Ottawa on January 19. The name "Margriet" means "Daisy" in Dutch, while "Francisca" was given as the second name because it means "Liberty." Reports from the occupied country say that an increasing number of girl babies are being named "Margriet," to the great annoyance of the Germans.

The opening reception at the United War Relief Center Friday, at which many priminent guests from diplomatic and official Government circles are expected to be present, will raise the curtain on a month-long calendar of exhibits and events high-lighting post-invasion Holland.

During the month of May, chosen because it is the third anniversary of Holland's continuing fight against aggression, the Netherlands exhibit will be open daily, on week days from 10 a. m. to 6:30 p. m., to acquaint the public with the spirit of the people of this United Nations country and the conditions under which they strive. It is under the auspices of the Queen Wilhelmina Fund, a Community War Fund agency.

Mrs. A. Loudon, wife of the Netherlands Ambassador, and vice chairman of the Queen Wilhelmina Fund, heads the committee which has planned and carried out the May exhibit at the United War Relief Center.

An interesting feature of the exhibit will be the two sets of mural designs on Holland by the artist, Joep Nicolaas, one conceived before and one directly after the tragic invasion of Holland in May, 1940. Mr. Nicolaas, famed as Europe's foremost creator of designs for stained-glass windows, is scheduled to be present in person during a program at the United War Relief Center on Sunday afternoon, May 23.

At least two evening programs will be held on successive Wednesdays, May 19 and May 26, in connection with the exhibit, at the 1218 Connecticut Avenue Center. Ambassador Loudon will speak at 9 p. m. on May 19, and a motion picture on Holland will be shown.

In New York

Mrs. E. Holley Poe and Miss Mary F. Phelps of Washington have arrived in New York and are stopping at the Hotel Weylin. Mr. and Mrs. Wilfird Fleisher of Washington are at the Weylin also.

Johnson at Napier Field immediately after the graduation of the bridegroom from the Advanced Flying School there.

Miss Stevah Webb of Washington attended the bride as maid of honor and Lieut. Leo J. Weet of Pittsburgh, Pa., classmate of the bridegroom, was best man. Dudley Leizear of Laurel, Md., gave the bride in marriage.

The bride was gowned in white satin fashioned on princess lines, with a long train. With it she wore a finger-tip veil and carried a shower bouquet of white roses.

Mrs. Frederick McDonald was the matron of honor and only attendant and Frederick McDonald, brother of the bridegroom, was the best man.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents.

Musical Film To Be Feature at Preview Sunday

Shostakovich's "March of the United Nations," which was presented to the music world four months ago, has been produced as a technicolor picture and will be presented for the first time as a preview to the United Nations Club on Sunday evening at 7:15 at Hotel 2400.

Also to be shown that evening, which will be the seventh in the film series sponsored by the club and the first all-American evening, will be the "Cavalcade of America." An historical document produced for the World's Fair, it is the story of America and her Presidents from the time of George Washington. It tells of the bloodshed and heartaches that made the Nation a great democracy.

Beside these two features there will be a "sneak preview," which must remain a secret until shown.

Tea Tomorrow, China Benefit

A tea in the interest of Chinese children will be the party given tomorrow afternoon from 4:30 to 8 o'clock at the home of Mrs. Hazel Taylor, 3315 R Street, Georgetown.

As Chief of Staff of the Second Marine Brigade, this white-haired, dark-eyebrowed general served in Shanghai in 1937. No second-guesser, he admits only that "we all were conscious of the tension and hostility."

Just back from a tour of his services's training camps, General Schmidt is pleased by what he saw. "The Marine Corps famous esprit is the result of deliberate indoctrination," he explains. "In training, the men are taught the glorious history of the corps and what is expected of them to live up to it. We have a lot to be proud of.

Outlook Optimistic

"The draftees are working out very well," he continues candidly. "Of course, to date we have all been getting the cream of the selectees. As we get further down the line, we can't expect the caliber to be of its present high grade."

Square-built and sturdy, General Schmidt has an earthy quality, a realistic mind. "Your guess is as good as mine," is his answer to a "duration" question. After a "bad year in 1942," the general finds the war outlook "much better now." He's quite optimistic, but don't count on having your boys home for Christmas on General Schmidt's say-so.

The general's life is organized around an early-to-bed-and-to-rise regime. His alarm clock rings about 6 and he checks into his office by 8. Though he's on 24-hour call, he doesn't believe in midnight-oil burning or the seven-day week.

All-Out Marine Family

His hobby, if any, is fishing and on his latest inspection trip he managed to sneak away for a few rod and line sessions. In the prewar days, he and his son, Richard, used to devote one month a year to a fishing orgy. Richard is now a major in the Marine Corps, stationed at San Diego.

The general confesses that he plays a "poor game of golf" and that he gave up tennis when his son could beat him. He likes to read—particularly biographies—but he does so much reading at his desk that the printed word now holds little after-office-hours appeal.

General and Mrs. Schmidt live at the Marine Barracks. Mrs. Schmidt has a number of service and charity interests, including a regular bandage-rolling stint. Their daughter is the wife of Maj. W. R. Wendt of the Marine Corps, making the Schmidt's Marine family roster complete.

A native of Holdredge, Nebr., General Schmidt was appointed a second lieutenant in 1909. Since his entry in the corps he has served at numerous foreign posts, at sea aboard the Oklahoma, Montana and Tennessee, and at various stations in this country.

Wears Navy Cross

Among his domestic posts are the Marine Corps Schools, where he was an instructor; the Department of the Pacific, as assistant chief of staff of the commanding general, and Paymaster Department Headquarters in Washington as executive officer. He is a graduate of the Field Officers' Course, Marine Corps Schools, and of the Army Command and General Staff School at Fort Leavenworth, Kans. He took over his present job in February of last year.

For distinguished service as Brigade Intelligence Officer in Nicaragua from 1928 to 1929, General Schmidt was awarded the Navy Cross. The President of Nicaragua bestowed on him the Nicaraguan Medal of Distinction and Diploma and the Nicaraguan Medal of Merit with Silver Star. In addition he holds the Expeditionary Medal with two bronze stars, the Mexican Service Medal, the Victory Medal, the Yangtse Service Medal, the Second Nicaraguan Campaign Medal and the American Defense Service Medal.

J. C. Bradleys Recently Wed, On Honeymoon

Mr. and Mrs. John Curtis Bradley, who were married on Saturday, May 1, left after the wedding reception for their honeymoon. The bride before her marriage was Miss Harriet Ann Fisher, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Wellen Fisher of Chevy Chase, Md. Mr. Bradley is the son of Mrs. John Curtis Bradley of New York and Washington. Dr. Frederick Brown Harris officiated at the ceremony held in the Foundry Methodist Church at 7:30 o'clock.

Mr. Fisher gave his daughter in marriage. She wore a white marquisette and lace gown with a Brittany lace cap trimmed with orange blossoms. She carried a cascade bouquet of white roses and sweet peas with a shower of white hyacinths. Miss Jean Fisher, who was maid of honor for her sister, wore a white mousseline de soie gown and carried a bouquet of mixed spring flowers.

Lieut. John E. Shekell of Washington was best man, and the ushers were Eldon E. Sweezy of Washington and Elmo J. Ceconi of Arlington, Va.

The bride is a graduate of Northfield Seminary and attended Goucher College and George Washington University. Mr. Bradley is a student at George Washington University Law School and is a member of Phi Sigma Kappa and Gate and Key honorary society.

Josephine James Is Bride-Elect

Mr. and Mrs. Fleet H. James of Purcellville, Va., announce the engagement of their daughter, Josephine Leslie, to Maynard H. Waterfield, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. John E. Waterfield of Sandusky, Ohio.

Mr. Waterfield is now employed in Washington on the secretarial staff of Senator Harold H. Burton of Ohio. The wedding will take place here in the early summer.

Daisies, Not Tulips, to Be Offered At Netherlands Exhibit Opening

Four small children in Holland garb will offer a flower to each of the guests attending the opening of the Netherlands exhibit at the United War Relief Center today from 4 to 6 p. m.

Not the traditional tulip, but a simple field flower—the daisy—will be featured in connection with the Netherlands exhibit, as sponsored by the Queen Wilhelmina Fund here.

For the daisy, according to the Netherlanders here, is now worn by their people as a tribute to their war heroes and to their martyred dead. The white-petaled blossom with the heart of orange has become in this little occupied country a symbol of loyalty to the House of Orange.

Children who will distribute flowers at the exhibit opening today include Jetty Loudon, 4½-year-old daughter of the Netherland's Ambassador; 5-year-old Elizabeth Boon, daughter of the Second Secretary, and the two sons of the Netherland's Counselor, Pieter, 3, and Dirk-Jan van Houten, 6.

There is, of course, a connection between the popularity of the daisy and the name which Princess Juliana bestowed upon her third child—Princess Margriet Francisca, born in Ottawa on January 19. The name "Margriet" means "Daisy" in Dutch, while "Francisca" was given as the second name because it means "Liberty." Reports from the occupied country say that an increasing number of girl babies are being named "Margriet," to the great annoyance of the Germans.

The opening reception at the United War Relief Center Friday, at which many priminent guests from diplomatic and official Government circles are expected to be present, will raise the curtain on a month-long calendar of exhibits and events high-lighting post-invasion Holland.

During the month of May, chosen because it is the third anniversary of Holland's continuing fight against aggression, the Netherlands exhibit will be open daily, on week days from 10 a. m. to 6:30 p. m., to acquaint the public with the spirit of the people of this United Nations country and the conditions under which they strive. It is under the auspices of the Queen Wilhelmina Fund, a Community War Fund agency.

Mrs. A. Loudon, wife of the Netherlands Ambassador, and vice chairman of the Queen Wilhelmina Fund, heads the committee which has planned and carried out the May exhibit at the United War Relief Center.

An interesting feature of the exhibit will be the two sets of mural designs on Holland by the artist, Joep Nicolaas, one conceived before and one directly after the tragic invasion of Holland in May, 1940. Mr. Nicolaas, famed as Europe's foremost creator of designs for stained-glass windows, is scheduled to be present in person during a program at the United War Relief Center on Sunday afternoon, May 23.

At least two evening programs will be held on successive Wednesdays, May 19 and May 26, in connection with the exhibit, at the 1218 Connecticut Avenue Center. Ambassador Loudon will speak at 9 p. m. on May 19, and a motion picture on Holland will be shown.

In New York

Mrs. E. Holley Poe and Miss Mary F. Phelps of Washington have arrived in New York and are stopping at the Hotel Weylin. Mr. and Mrs. Wilfird Fleisher of Washington are at the Weylin also.

Maryland Girl Is Married at Army Post Chapel

Miss Virginia Leizear, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Robert Leizear of Laurel, Md., was married a few days ago at the Napier Field Post Chapel at Dothan, Ala., to Lieut. Ralph W. E. Webb of Whitesburg, Ky., and Washington. The ceremony was performed by Chaplain Charles K. Johnson of Napier Field immediately after the graduation of the bridegroom from the Advanced Flying School there.

Miss Estevah Webb of Washington attended the bride as maid of honor and Lieut. Leo J. Weet of Pittsburgh, Pa., classmate of the bridegroom, was best man. Dudley Leizear of Laurel, Md., gave the bride in marriage.

For her wedding, the bride wore a gown of white net and lace with a finger-tip veil falling from a coronet of seed pearls. She carried a white prayer book, covered with gardenias.

J. E. McDonalds On Honeymoon

Now on their honeymoon trip to New York are the Joseph Edward McDonalds, whose wedding took place last Saturday in Mount Rainier, Md.

The former Miss Anne Elizabeth Goelling, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Goelling, and Private McDonald, son of Mrs. Ralph Flynn, were married at a nuptial mass in St. James Catholic Church at a 10 o'clock morning ceremony.

The bride was gowned in white satin fashioned on princess lines, with a long train. With it she wore a finger-tip veil and carried a shower bouquet of white roses.

Mrs. Frederick McDonald was the matron of honor and only attendant and Frederick McDonald, brother of the bridegroom, was the best man.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents.

Musical Film To Be Feature at Preview Sunday

Shostakovich's "March of the United Nations," which was presented to the music world four months ago, has been produced as a technicolor picture and will be presented for the first time as a preview to the United Nations Club on Sunday evening at 7:15 at Hotel 2400.

Also to be shown that evening, which will be the seventh in the film series sponsored by the club and the first all-American evening, will be the "Cavalcade of America." An historical document produced for the World's Fair, it is the story of America and her Presidents from the time of George Washington. It tells of the bloodshed and heartaches that made the Nation a great democracy.

Beside these two features there will be a "sneak preview," which must remain a secret until shown.

Tea Tomorrow, China Benefit

A tea in the interest of Chinese children will be the party given tomorrow afternoon from 4:30 to 8 o'clock at the home of Mrs. Hazel Taylor, 3315 R Street, Georgetown.

Many Chinese and British visitors will attend, and highlight of the afternoon will be the playing of "Jade" by Arden Clar, who has dedicated it to Mme. Chiang Kai-shek. It is hoped that each guest will contribute at least 50 cents to the benefit.

Among the patrons and patronesses are Capt. and Mrs. Robert Henderson, U. S. N., Col. and Mrs. Max B. Garber, Mrs. Harry Grier, Mrs. George Simmonds, Mrs. William P. Kent, Mr. and Mrs. D. Heywood Hardy, Col. and Mrs. Engmann Anderson, Dr. and Mrs. Henry Amiss Hornthal and Baroness Irene Ungern.

'Hangmen Also Die,' Is Super-Whodunit, Capitol

Story of Czech Courage, Based on Murder Of Heydrich, the 'Hangman,' Has Ace Cast; 'Bandwagon' Stage Revue Is a Real 'Circus'

"HANGMEN ALSO DIE." United Artists picturization of a story by Bert Brecht and Fritz Lang, adapted to the screen by John Wexley, costarring Brian Donlevy, Walter Brennan and Anna Lee, with Gene Lockhart, Dennis O'Keefe, Alexander Granach, Margaret Wycherly, Nana Bryant, Billy Roy, Tonio Selwart, Jonathan Hale, Lionel Stander, Byron Foulger, Virginia Farmer, Louis Donath, Edmund MacDonald, George Irving, James Bush, Arno Frey, Lester Sharpe, Arthur Loft, William Farnum and Reinhold Schuenzel. Produced and directed by Fritz Lang. At Loew's Capitol Theater.

DEDICATED to the courage and unshakable unity of the persecuted Czecho-Slovakian people, "Hangmen Also Die," the new screen attraction at Loew's Capitol Theater, nevertheless, is primarily an extravangantly melodramatic "cops-and-robbers" story, as packed with inconsistencies as it is with suspense and thrills and differing from the usual "whodunit" film only in the authenticity of the incident upon which it is based.

Reinhard Heydrich, the Nazi "protector" of the Czechs and affectionately known by them as "the hangman," was murdered and an uncounted number of innocent hostages were massacred in reprisal, but at that point all similarity between "Hangmen Also Die" and fact seems to end. So, beyond the purpose of the United Artists publicity department, the picture may not be looked upon as in any sense a political or historical document of importance, but must be viewed solely as an item armed with unerring accuracy at public enthusiasm for any drama of violence that beats the "master race" at its own game. This, "Hangman" most emphatically does, even if by occasionally specious means, and in so doing cannot but multiply admiration for the Spartan spirit of the Czechs.

In fashioning his script from an original story by Bert Brecht and Fritz Lang, John Wexley has set up such an elaborate design of espionage and counter-espionage, plot and counterplot, that it could not possibly all be expounded on the screen short of the running time of "Gone With the Wind." Hence a great deal is left to the spectator's imagination as to how certain escapes are effected, why shouted secrets are not overheard and how the whole Nazi organization in Czecho-Slovakia is duped into making a false report to Berlin as it is unbelievable and, by making the one Czech traitor its victim, leaves no tinge of resentment in any mind.

The identity of the patriotic assassin is revealed to the audience at the very outset and thereafter the entire movement of the film is devoted to the futile Nazi attempt to put the finger on him. The process casts suspicion on Prague's most distinguished citizenship and results in the methodical extermination of an appalling number of innocents who know no more about the facts in the case than their murderous persecutors. Paralleling the Nazi bewilderment and rising desperation is the marvelously efficient operation of the native underground, in such perfect unison of thought and action that torture and death seem a light penalty to pay for the ultimate benefits to country of keeping one's mouth shut. As already intimated, however, Director-Producer Fritz Lang frequently nullifies the virtue of this impurturbable silence by permitting his pivotal characters to scream when they should have whispered, or by omitting all clarification of how some of the miracles of coincidence happened to come about.

Acted by a Notable Cast

In assembling his cast, Lang chose a group of principals who could be trusted to gloss over the dramatic weaknesses of the story by the skill of their performances. Brian Donlevy, as the distinguished surgeon who renders his people a great service; Walter Brennan, the professor held as a hostage; Anna Lee, his daughter, who cannot see the justice in sparing one life at the cost of hundreds of others, and Alexander Granach, the Gestapo agent, who almost solved the case, but didn't, turn in portrayals that account for the greater part of the picture's dynamics—especially Mr. Granach. As the deludedly sure-footed sleuth, Mr. Granach manages to relieve a pretty grim study in brutality with a lusty sense of squad-room humor. Gene Lockhart again is the "Quisling" in the case, a role in which he has perfected himself by almost continuous practice down the years since "Algiers." Dennis O'Keefe, the romantic interest; Jonathan Hale, leader of the underground; Margaret Wycherly, an almost fatally "helpful" aunt, and literally scores of others keep the acting average high.

In the "Bandwagon" stage revue, Managing Director Gene Ford has made the embellishment fit the crime, as you might say, if the business added up to anything like a crime against anybody's amusement sense. Quite to the contrary, it adds up to the zippiest stage bill the Capitol has had in weeks, all in the circus mood. Mel Hall follows some introductory clowning with an amazing exhibition of unicycling and is followed, in turn, by the ebullient comic character impressions of Jackie Green, a gusty, singing comic with some nice tricks in his bag. Belett and the English Bros., contribute an interval of whirlwind gymnastic comedy and the orchestra on stage puts "Smoke Gets in Your Eyes" through a variety of paces, with Lynn Allison soloing handsomely. That extra clowning is tossed in with fine elan by Hugh Fitz and George Vivian just to keep the pressure high.

'Cinderella Girl' Gets Movie Plum

Hollywood.—Hollywood has a new "Cinderella Girl" in Ann Richards, who yesterday was one of thousands of young actresses striving hopefully for movie opportunity. Today she has been selected by Director King Vidor for the important dramatic feminine lead opposite Brian Donlevy in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "America."

An American girl, she has lived most of her life in Australia, where she was a leading film and stage star. The 23-year-old actress arrived in America on the last passenger ship to sail from Sydney after Pearl Harbor. Her first screen opportunity was in an M.-G-M short subject, "The Woman in the House."

"America" is the inspiring story of two young immigrants and their Americanization, told over a period of 45 years.

Hard to Find

Finding New Orleans and Saratoga Springs in the same section of California is the problem facing Director Sam Wood and his staff as they scout locations for exterior scenes of "Saratoga Trunk."

HEDDA HOPPER

Musicalizes Himself!

Hollywood, Calif., May 6.—About a year ago I dramatized the life of George Murphy on the air. Not long ago he came across that script and decided that by enlarging it, it would make a better musical picture than some of those he's played in. So he's gone and done it, and Metro's just about ready to buy it, with George playing himself. It's well known that George used to work in a coal mine, and only took to dancing when the girl he was in love with (now Mrs. Murphy) wanted a career. Too poor to hire a piano player, they persuaded the owner of a Chinese restaurant to let them dance there free for a couple of weeks till they could work up their routines. The Chinese cafe had a three-piece band. How he practically stole a dress suit away from an unsuspecting tailor will make a hilarious scene. Then, too, think of all the inserts he can use from his different pictures—that dance sequence he did with Fred Astaire, also with Eleanor Powell, and scenes with Judy Garland in her first grown-up picture, "Little Nellie Kelly." George is so smart to do it while he's young. But, oh, the rush of others who'll try to follow in his footsteps!

Amelia Earhart Career Seems Basis of 'Flight,' at RKO-Keith's

By Marjorie Kelly.

Amelia Earhart was always good copy. And when, in 1937, she was lost over the Japanese-mandated islands in the Pacific, it was the biggest aviation story ever to hit the front pages.

If "Flight for Freedom," which opened yesterday at RKO-Keith's, seems a little too fantastic to be good fiction, it is because the story may very well be true—the story of Amelia Earhart's last flight. In view of what we have been learning in recent months about the Japanese, and have had brought home to us with brutal force in the story of the martyrdom of our fliers, it is not too unlikely.

Toni Carter's story is not Amelia Earhart's, except for the last flight. But Rosalind Russell, as Toni Carter, is very much like Amelia Earhart. The gaiety and courage of the famous flier, the unfailing wit that ranged from tenderness to a wry ability to see the funny side of her own misfortunes, the gallantry that made Amelia Earhart's first thought after her crash landing at Luke Field, just before the last try, "If we don't burn up I want to try again"—its' all there, in this performance.

Numerous Similarities

There are other similarities. Toni Carter is not just a trick flier, a publicity seeker; there is a purpose in each of her flights. It was so with Miss Earhart, though no flight she ever made approached the importance of her last flight. The film, which was made with the cooperation and approval of the United States Navy, tells the inside story of this flight. How far the Navy's approval of this film represents Navy opinion as to what, exactly, did happen to Amelia Earhart does not concern this department. But it is safe to assume that even so much as is known of the whole story has not yet been told, and can't be told.

Toni Carter, like Miss Earhart, was to have settled down and given up long-distance stunt flying after she had circled the globe at the Equator. But her first attempt is interrupted by a message from the Navy, summoning her to Washington. There she is told that the Navy has reason to believe the Japs are fortifying their islands in the Pacific in violation of the Versailles Treaty, and that it is imperative to the safety of the Nation that the illegal fortifications be photographed and mapped. Since sending planes over the islands is forbidden by the Japanese, the only way to do this is to have a flier lost so that the Navy could send its planes to search the area and while doing so make the much-needed photographs. And the only flier who has caught the public imagination to such an extent that the Japs couldn't object to the search for her, even though it took United States planes over their islands, is Toni. She agrees to the mission and promises her fiance, who is capably played by Herbert Marshall, that she will give up flying and marry him when the flight is finished.

But at the last minute she learns that the Japs are aware of her purpose and prepared to rescue her within five minutes of the time she lands on the island from which she is to be "rescued." She faces the alternative of giving up her mission or deliberately crashing. Her choice makes a gripping ending that has, in spite of your awareness of the outcome, an element of surprise.

Skillfully Played and Directed

Fred MacMurray is engaging and convincing as the flier, whose records Toni tries to beat through three years while she is secretly in love with him, and Herbert Marshall, already mentioned as her fiance, gives a thoughtful and sensitive performance. But it is Miss Russell who carries the picture.

Lothar Mendes' direction is imaginative and careful, and there is some very beautiful photography for which Lee Garmes is responsible.

'Eddie the First' a Spring Tonic

Those in quest of a gay, tuneful and amusing spring frolic, will find it in "Eddie the First," out at Catholic University this week.

In fashioning this musical biography of Eddie Dowling, in two multiscened acts, Art Mullen and Denny Madden have shrewdly made their plot consist of fashioning a musical biography of Eddie Dowling. If that sounds too cryptic—or transparent, as the case may be—the youthful Messrs. Mullen and Madden have written themselves into their charade as two Catholic University students, interviewing Mr. Dowling backstage for material to be used later on the stage. That material is set down in song, dance and comedy as they go along, until at the final curtain, much to Mr. Dowling's surprise, there the whole thing is complete!

The narrative, of a necessity born of the Dowling versatility and breadth of activity and experience in the theater, is sketchy, but contrives to embrace logically enough his introduction to the public as a boy singer in St. Paul's choir in London, then as vaudeville performer on this side; his meeting with and wooing of Ray Dooley, at Keith's; his success as a musical comedy author, star and producer and, finally, as a producer of serious drama and Pulitzer Prize and Drama Critics Circle Award winner—both with Saroyan's "The Time of Your Life," in the same year.

Families Provide Fun

The Dowling and Dooley families are made sources of much of the piece's comedy—the former with 15 brothers and 1 sister to draw upon; the latter with its inimitable Gordon, Johnny and Willie, in addition to Ray. For a touch of satirical fun, Gov. Al Smith of New York is introduced as pal of a street sweeper, and other important personages in and out of the theater have their brief moments in the goings-on.

The score of 19 musical numbers is a melodious blending of songs inseparably associated with Eddie Dowling's years on the stage and six original compositions by members of the student enrollment—"Startling," by Betty Healy and Bill Coleman; "Yeah, Echo," "Shout Hooray," "Jeremiah" and "Eddie's On His Way," by Betty Healy and Art Mullen and Denny Madden, and "Somebody's Man," by Margaret Linskie and Earl S. Bossey.

John Flynn and Bibi Osterwald acquit themselves to high audience tumult as Eddie Dowling and Ray Dooley, and Ted Tiller proves one of the comedy mainstays in a variety of assignments, most notably as Johnny Doley, who was, perhaps, the most eccentric of all the male Dooleys. In the Ziegfeld "Follies of 1919" minstrel scene, Bill Coleman and Barney Puck score individual hits as W. C. Fields and Bert Williams, respectively, and three engaging singing voices are revealed by Elinor Oliver, Judy Klingenhagen and Phyllis Schwartz.

One of the highlights of the entertainment is the precision dancing by the Junior Roxyettes, who reflect the distinctive abilities of Anolyn Arden and Nancy Raden of the Earle Theater staff.

Something ought to be said of each of the cast that spreads over a page and a half of program, but in the absence of both time and space, it must suffice that "Eddie the First" in its every aspect is an expert job and tiptop springtime diversion.

LEONARD LYONS

Loose-Leaf Notebook

New York, May 6.

Last week Dean Alfange, who polled almost half a million votes in New York's gubernatorial campaign, answered the telephone in his office, while his receptionist was away from the switchboard. "Hello, Dean," he heard the caller say. "I read that speech you made in Newark. Fine speech. But why didn't you also take a whack at those reactionary Democrats, who are worse than those reactionary Republicans?" . . . "Now wait a minute," Alfange interrupted, indignantly. "Who is this—giving me such gratuitous advice?" . . . "This," the caller identified himself, "is Wendell Willkie."

Robert Wood, head of Sears, Roebuck and former chairman of the America First Committee, will tour the Pacific bases as an Air Force general. His duties will be in connection with the supply division . . . As part of its own good will program in South America, the British government, with the help of its book publishers, is placing 700 British titles each month, free of charge, in South America's bookstores. The leftovers are distributed to the schools . . . Maj. Thornton Wilder, who won his third Pulitzer Prize—for his "Skin of Our Teeth"—said "Forgive me for not being excited. I wasn't excited even the first time."

Three weeks after the rehearsals began for "Oklahoma," and after the management became positive that the show would be a hit, Edwin Clay applied for a job and was turned down by an assistant stage manager. He left the theater. Rouben Mamoulian, the show's director, was standing outside the theater, spoke to Clay—whose principal experience was with the Music Hall's choral group—and hired him as one of the 12 singers in the show . . . Mamoulian later gave Clay some speaking lines, and finally made him the understudy. When Alfred Drake, who plays the leading male role, had laryngitis, Clay played the leading role in this, Broadway's No. 1 hit. And that night was the night Life's cameramen photographed the show for a color spread.

Former Ambassador Joseph Davies made his screen debut in an introduction to the movie version of his "Mission to Moscow," in which he is portrayed by Walter Huston. In this introduction Davies explains why he wrote and released his diplomatic diary . . . This portion of the movie was filmed after the picture was completed. Davies approached Michael Curtiz, the director, and asked: "How shall I dress?" . . . "Just stay in character, Mr. Davies," the director advised, "dress like Walter Huston."

Eliot Janeway of Time, Inc., is reviewing Harold Ickes' autobiography for The Nation and will title it "I Am the Lord High Executioner." Janeway, an intimate of Ickes,' is the one who predicted in the January issue of Fortune that Ickes would be the only one left in the Administration to trade with John L. Lewis and, without violence, prevent the miners' strike . . . Yesterday, incidentally, Mrs. Janeway was taken to Doctors Hospital where she gave birth to a boy. Before she left her house she rushed back to her desk. "Today I'm giving birth to a novel, too," she explained to her husband. She signed her contract with Doubleday, Doran—and went off to the hospital.

A group of U. S. O. entertainers visited an American base in Newfoundland and asked the soldiers whether they had had any excitement recently . . "A plane landed here and out stepped Capt. Clark Gable," one veteran reported. "He was followed by a colonel—who was carrying Gable's bag." "A colonel carrying a captain's bags," the soldier sighed. "And we were told that ours is a democratic Army."

A Soviet tank-corps captain was in Lindy's. On the collar of his uniform he wore a single bar denoting his rank. "Why do you have only one bar?" he was asked. "In our Army, lieutenants wear one bar. Captains wear two" . . . "In our Soviet army," the Russian explained, "the conservation of critical metal is more important than the display of rank."

Lois Wilfield, the novelist, was in La Vie Parisienne reminiscing on the international set which used to flock to the Riviera. Her fiancé, a Russian, now in this country, who paid high fees to those who would introduce him to people of high estate. He tried, desperately, to meet the wife of the Aga Khan, but couldn't manage it. The lady with whom he was negotiating for this introduction was dissuaded by one of her friends: "Here's what will happen, if you start doing business with him." she was told. "He'll pay you $10,000 to meet a Baron, $20,000 for a Count, $50,000 for a Prince, and then, pouf!—you're through."

Navy Slow in Making Use of Helicopters

MORE AND MORE people on Capitol Hill and in the Government are now wondering how much faith they can place in the Navy's official announcements. Beginning with the announcement of losses at Pearl Harbor and coming down to Knox's recent unsuccessful argument with the Truman Committee over submarine losses, the unfortunate effect has been to shake public confidence in Navy communiques.

Latest incident was the speech of Capt. Leland Lovett, usually efficient Chief of Navy Press Relations, at the National Newspaper Promotion Association in New York, in which he told how the Navy was using helicopters to combat the submarine.

Captain Lovett went into some detail regarding the use of helicopters over Atlantic sea lanes. However, a careful check in Army, Navy and Maritime circles discloses that not one helicopter is in use on United States ships today.

Furthermore, the platform on one ship from which a helicopter experiment will be made has not yet been completed. The experiment should take place within two weeks.

Program Bungled

IN OTHER WORDS, Captain Lovett was either badly misinformed or else was pulling the chestnuts out of the fire for his superior officers who bungled the helicopter program. Or there may be one other explanation. The Truman Committee report, criticizing the Navy for not using helicopters, had been sent to the Navy in advance and was about to be published. Lovett's speech, made one day before, might have been for the purpose of forestalling the Truman Committee.

But all this, amazing as it is, is not the complete story. Inside fact is that the Navy not only has not done anything about helicopters until the last few days, but actually has been opposing them, despite appeals from the Maritime Commission, the Coast Guard and, to some extent, from the Army that helicopters are the only way to lick the submarine.

Admiral Howard Vickery, crack production expert of the Maritime Commission, was one of the first to see the advantages of the helicopter. Another was Capt. William Kossler of the Coast Guard. They pointed out that if merchant ships could carry their own "eyes" at sea, spotting submarines miles away, United States shipping could be made relatively safe.

Helicopters can hover over the sea at night, dropping flares to show up submarines on the surface. More and more, subs are surfacing at night, cruising at top speed to close in on helpless merchant ships.

Spotting U-Boats

THE Maritime Commission and Coast Guard also have pointed out that helicopters, when carried on merchant ships, can do exactly what the Germans have done, survey the sea from the air. Giant German bombers cruise over the North Atlantic, sight a convoy and then inform the sub packs where they are. Similarly, helicopters could sight subs and inform protecting destroyers where to look for them.

But despite these arguments, the Navy, as late as April 11 (just 10 days before Captain Lovett stated that the Navy was actively using helicopters), sent a report to the Lend-Lease Administration expressing opposition by naval airmen to helicopter manufacture by Henry Kaiser for the British. Nevertheless, Kaiser is going ahead with an important contract for the British.

Chief opponent of the helicopter has been Capt. Morton K. Fleming in the Navy's Bureau of Aeronautics. Supposed to be the Navy's rotary-wing expert, he has consistently pooh-poohed the idea. This may be one reason why it didn't come to the attention of Admiral Ernie King, Commander of the Fleet, until recently. Finally, King wrote a directive, in effect circumventing his own naval airmen and asking the Coast Guard to dig into the question of helicopters. Fleming even had some talks with officials of the Sikorsky plant, chief manufacturer of helicopters, tending to discourage them regarding use by the Navy.

As a result of all this, it has only been within the latter part of April that the decks have been cleared for what may be one of the major solutions to the menace of the submarine.

Capitol Chaff

THE PALACE GUARD already has sharpened the knife to lop off Henry Wallace if FDR runs for a fourth term. Said Harry Hopkins to a friend: "Why have a man on the ticket who can't carry his own State?" . . . Wonder whether Harry could carry his and Wallace's home State—Iowa? . . . The Irving Berlin show, "This Is the Army," will not go overseas. This was decided after much debate, largely because of transportation and the difficulty of staging the show near war areas . . . When Undersecretary of War Patterson shot his news story on high-octane gas shortage (so criticized by D. Nelson) he did it without benefit of advice from his press experts . . .

Ickes and Coal

THERE WAS one thing the coal operators didn't realize when they let the coal negotiations drag so long without making John L. Lewis an offer—namely, that the Government itself would take over the mines and that their operation would be in the hands of tough, crochety, honest Harold Ickes.

Now they realize, however, that Ickes doesn't plan to give the mines up immediately after settlement of the coal strike.

Just what his plans are no one knows, probably are not definitely formulated in his own mind. But it may well be that the mines will be kept in Government hands for the duration.

This, of course, will mean a Government subsidy for a part of the coal industry—not a revolutionary thing these days when the oil companies are getting paid nearly a million dollars a day by the Government for the railroad haul of oil and gasoline to the eastern seaboard.

One trouble with the coal industry has been that wages have to lag behind to keep pace with the least efficient coal mines. Some mines make huge profits; others, where the coal is deep or thin, are right on the margin.

If Ickes keeps wartime control over the coal mines it will mean that the profitable mines will pay the deficits and higher wages of the marginal mines. Some people have the idea that this was one of the things John L. Lewis had in the back of his head.

Heart Ailment Fatal to Hersey. Ex-Congressman

A heart ailment yesterday proved fatal to Ira Greenlief Hersey, 84, former Representative from Maine, at the home of his niece Mrs. Frederick L. Pearce, of 517 Cedar Street Northwest.

Mr. Hersey was in the House of Representatives from 1917 to 1931 and was a Republican.

After his retirement from Congress he returned to his native Houlton, Me., where he served as probate judge for nine years, retiring in 1942.

He was educated in the public schools of Houlton and Ricker Classical Institute of the same town. He was admitted to the bar in 1880.

Mr. Hersey entered politics in 1909 when he was elected to the Main legislature. Elected to the State Senate in 1913 he finally became president of that body in 1915.

Mrs. Pearce is his only near relative.

Funeral services will be held at Houlton.

BACKACHE, LEG PAINS MAY BE DANGER SIGN

Of Tired Kidneys

If backache and leg pains are making you miserable, don't just complain and do nothing about them. Nature may be warning you that your kidneys need attention.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from the blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Group Reports Today on U.S. Petting of Japs

Senator Chandler (Democrat) of Kentucky announced yesterday that his special subcommittee will make a report to the full Military Affairs Committee today on its investigation of conditions in Japanese internment camps in the Far West.

He made the announcement in the Senate as Senator Robertson (Republican) of Wyoming declared in the chamber that the present system of handling interned Japanese "cannot continue without trouble."

Chandler supported the main thesis of Robertson's speech which warned of danger from failure of the War Relocation Authority to segregate Japanese according to their degree of loyalty to the United States and charged that the authority was "pampering and petting" internees.

The Kentuckian whose subcommittee made a first-hand investigation of conditions in the camps, told reporters that "something has to be done." While declining to disclose what recommendations the subcommittee will make to the full committee today, he added:

"When the American people know what is going on in those camps, I am certain that they will be very much concerned about it."

Bolivia Ready To Fight, Says Its President

Gen. Enrique Penaranda, President of Bolivia, told newspapermen yesterday that a Bolivian army would be ready to take the field against the Axis any time the Allied high command decided that it was needed.

Meantime, he said, Bolivia will concentrate on increasing her production of strategic materials, especially tin. She is the only producer of tin in the Western Hemisphere, and is one of the three largest producers in the world.

General Penaranda said at a press conference in the garden of Blair house that, under the decree placing Bolivia in a state of war with the Axis powers, some 10,000 men have been drafted to reinforce 50,000 already working in the mines. They will be paid regular miners' wages.

In a speech in the House of Representatives yesterday, the soldier-statesman from the Andes suggested an American Inter-Parliamentary Union "to strengthen our ties of friendship and understanding." Until now, he said, the legislative bodies of the Western Hemisphere have lived apart except for the bond of "our democratic ideals." He added:

"Now that an era of closer political, cultural and economic interchange has, fortunately, been initiated, it is the task of the law-making bodies of the New World to strengthen our ties of friendship and understanding, by playing an ever-increasing role in the external relations of our countries.

Miss Sue White, Women Voters' Leader, Dies

Miss Sue S. White, 56, of 2703 Russell Road, Alexandria, formerly executive secretary to the Democratic National Committee, died at her home yesterday at 7:45 p. m. after an illness of several months.

Miss White was born in Henderson, Tenn., and was educated in the schools of that city. She came to Washington in 1918 in the interest of the women's suffrage amendment. She studied law at Washington College of Law and was admitted to the bar in 1923.

She then went back to Tennessee where she was active in the fight to secure the adoption of the suffrage amendment.

From 1920 to 1926 she was secretary to Senator Kenneth McKellar (Democrat), Tennessee. She then went to Tennessee where she practiced law until 1930 when she returned to Washington as executive secretary of the Democratic National Committee. She retained this post until 1934, when she went with the NRA. She later became associated with the Social Security Board and remained with that organization and became assistant to the general counsel of the agency, re-named the Federal Security Agency.

She was a member of the Federal Bar Association, the Women's Bar Association and the Business and Professional Women's Club, in addition to other organizations.

Miss White is survived by a brother, Marshall K. White, and a sister, Mrs. Frederick Schiller, both of California.

Funeral arrangements have not yet been completed.

Pilot's Romance Not Whirlwind

Hollywood, May 6 (AP).—When Capt. William J. Crum, pilot of the famous "Jack the Ripper" bomber in Europe, and Miss Ella Jean Tenney were married in Tucson, Ariz., April 26, it seems some of their friends mistakenly got the idea the couple had just met that day for the first time.

But they were wrong, says Captain Crumm, who asserts he and Miss Tenney, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Warren M. Tenney of Flagstaff, Ariz., first met in July, 1942, when he flew from his Walla Walla, Wash., base to Tucson on a cross-country training flight.
